Smith said.

The S.G.A. always held upperclass elections in the spring and only held freshman elections in the fall. That changed last fall.

The size of the S.G.A. senate had not been changed since the 1970's said David Atkins, assistant dean of student affairs. "Additional seats were added to give a better cross-section of the campus," he said.

The five upperclass seats in Tuesday's election include four seats that will be offered each fall and one seat to fill a resigned senate seat.

Prior to last fall, upperclass elections had been held by school precincts in the spring. Fall semester would roll around and the senators would move and be in different precincts.

"It really didn't make sense the way it was," Atkins said.

The solution was to hold regular upperclass elections in the spring, eliminate the precincts and offer four senate seats in the fall. The fall election also takes care of vacancies left by resignations and people who do not return to Elon, Atkins said.

doesn't wither, they will discover the basic economic fact of life in the '90s: two workers equal one good job.

About the household drudgery she's trying to avoid? Well, if she follows the pattern, Blondie will do less housework than before. But she'll still do most of the work that gets done. Home will become her second shift.

In any case, with luck, this was the last week Blondie will ever have to ask Dagwood for pocket money. If the studies are right, as a employed spouse, she'll start sharing financial decisions. Her job will give them an extra ounce of two-job security, and if Blondie makes it in business, they may even afford to get the kids out of the strip and off to college.

Oh yes, one final piece of advice to this wife. Ms. Bumstead, when you get out there in the work world, for gawdsakes, don't let the guys still call you Blondie.

Correction

Last week's story on the renovations to the Carlton building contained an error. The amount of money for the renovations that has been gifted to the school is $300,000.

Eventually the equipment will be added to the other two floors, Pat Kinney director of public information and publications said.

Additionally, audio-visual equipment will be in the first floor lecture halls, not all three floors, as the story said. The Pendulum regrets the error.
