An Elon College alumnus and his wife made a $1 million gift toward the college's Investing In Excellence fundraising campaign, Elon College President Fred Young announced Tuesday.

Furman C. Moseley, a 1956 graduate of the college, and his wife Susan made the gift and the new campus center has been named The Moseley Center in their honor.

With the Moseley's contribution, the three-year old campaign has now raised more than $19.6 million.

"It is a delight and an honor to receive this generous gift from Furman and Susan. His leadership as a student, a businessman and an alumnus are truly exemplary, and Susan is recognized for her civic leadership throughout the state of Washington," Young said in a press release.

This summer, Elon College surpassed the $18 million goal of its Investing In Excellence fundraising campaign following a $1 million gift from an alumnus and member of the Elon College Board of Trustees, according to college officials.

In recognition of Robert Model donation, the Board of Trustees has named the fine arts building The Faith Rockefeller Model Center for the Arts in honor of Model's mother, Faith Rockefeller Model, according to a press release.

"We're grateful to Bob Model for this outstanding display of generosity and leadership," President Fred Young said in a press release. "This gift is indicative of his vision for the future of Elon College. We are truly fortunate to have Mr. Model as a loyal alumnus and dedicated member of the board of trustees."

SGA president appoints senators to vacant offices

Erick Gill

Three seniors, two juniors and one sophomore were appointed to class offices last Thursday by SGA.

Student Government Association President Larry Williams appointed for the senior class, Khalil Ekulona as president, Megan Jones as vice president and Kristen Wither as secretary/treasurer. For the junior class, Racheal Dugger was appointed vice president and Robin Moats was appointed secretary/treasurer. Kelly Parker was appointed secretary/treasurer for the sophomore class.

During the last SGA elections, no one ran for any senior or junior offices. According to the current constitution, the president may appoint people, who served at least one year in the senate, to vacant offices with the approval of the senate.

Elections for freshmen class president, vice president, secretary/treasurer and eight senators will be held Sept. 26. Five empty positions for junior and senior senators will be elected as well.

Williams said that about 25 freshmen have picked up petitions for the upcoming elections. The petitions are due Wednesday.

The rules for this year's election have changed from last year. According to the new rules, students are allowed to campaign in residence halls until 10 p.m. Also, the winner of this year's election will be determined by popular vote: the candidate who receives the most votes.

Williams said a personal goal for next year is to have every class filled by election and at least five people run for president. Three people ran for president in the last election.

Also this summer, Williams hired as a SGA secretary, sophomore Michael Rodgers, who is expected to be paid on an hourly basis.

Last spring, the SGA Senate began revising its existing constitution. Williams said the constitution needs more revisions and he has asked political science professors and administrators to read the revisions.

The new constitution, if approved by two-thirds of the Senate and a majority of the student body, would create the executive office of secretary. Williams said he would appoint Rodgers to fill that position.

Unlike the other executive positions, the secretary would not have to be a rising junior or senior.

If the revised constitution is passed and Rodgers is approved by the senate, he will become a paid executive member of the SGA, Williams said. Williams, SGA Vice President Cathy Sparks and SGA Treasurer Zuni Johnson earn $200 a month, Williams said.

Though Rodgers is not yet an executive officer, Williams said Rodgers was hired by the SGA as a secretary and will be paid on an hourly basis. Rodgers said his wage See SGA, Page 4.

Sexual assault charges dropped

First-degree rape charges against an Elon College student were dropped this summer seven months after charges were filed.

The first-degree rape charges, filed in November 1993, against William T. Mills of Northfield Apartments in Gibsonville, were dismissed on June 6, according to Alamance County Superior Court documents.

The charges against Mills were dropped because District Attorney

Steve Balog chose not to prosecute, Mill's attorney Clay Hemric said.

Balog said the case was handled by his assistant Bob Martin. Martin said the case was dropped due to lack of evidence.

Martin said it was "a complex area," because the case was strictly a "one on one" situation.

Martin said that he received a phone call from the alleged victim's boyfriend on the night the alleged rape occurred. Martin said the victim didn't want to go to the hospital for a medical examination, which See Assault, Page 15.
