

Colonnades showcases students' creativity through words and images

Kevin Kindle

Reporter

Elon's student-run literary magazine offers students a creative way to remember their year.

Colonnades annually publishes students' fiction, non-fiction, art, poetry, photography and digital art. Entries for the magazine are accepted throughout the fall semester. During Winter Term, the editorial staff makes selections from the entries.

These selections are then passed on to the editor-in-chief, who makes the final decision on which submissions will be published.

The magazine publishes about 50 to 60 entries per year. About 30 staff members work to put the magazine together.

During spring semester, staff members devote a large amount of time setting up getting the final layout. Once the

Colonnades Staff 2003-2004

Mission Statement:

Colonnades' purpose is to unite students, faculty, staff and organizations on campus in the annual printing of one literary and art publication.

Editor in Chief-Mathew Fiander

Layout Editor-Sarah Umberger

Non-Fiction Editor-Kaitlyn North

Poetry Editor-Liz Wimberly

Fiction Editor-Anne Corbett

Staff members decided to name the magazine after the structures that pervade the campus architecture layout is complete, the book is put on a disk and given to an off-campus printing company.

"There is definitely a new dedication to the book that has been lacking for at least the four years I've been here. Our name is becoming more prominent around campus," said Matt Fiander, the editor of Colonnades.

As editor, Fiander oversees

“ There is definitely a new dedication to the book that has been lacking for at least the four years I've been here.

—Matt Fiander, editor of Colonnades

the layout of the publication and selection of staff, as well as the printing and distribution of the magazine.

"The unveiling of last year's magazine was a fairly big day. We distributed somewhere between 700 and 800 magazines in that one day. It was quite exciting and we were and are still very proud of that publication," said Fiander.

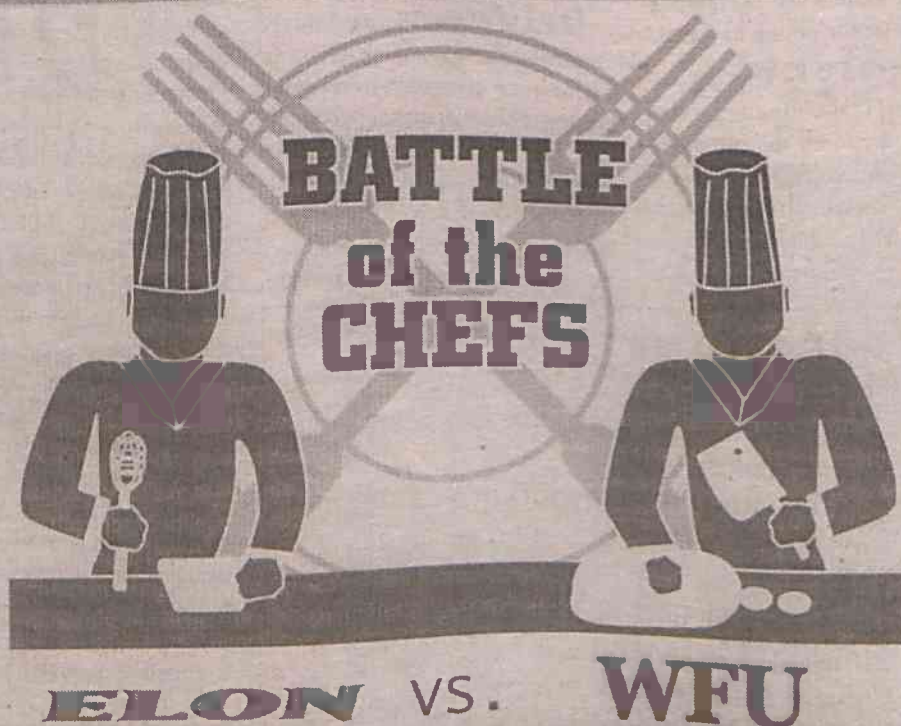

When submitting a piece, students are asked to include their Social Security numbers and title of the work on the top of the first page of each piece submitted. Submissions must be received in a hard copy and on a Mac-formatted computer disk.

Attach to each submission a separate index card with your Social Security number, title of work, name, campus box number, phone number and e-mail address.

Poetry and fiction must be basically grammatically and mechanically correct or they will not be accepted. This year, photographs and artwork will be printed in color.

For more information about the magazine, contact Colonnades at ext. 7219. Submissions may be dropped off in Whitley 201 or mailed to Campus Box 7011.

Contact Kevin Kindle at pendulum@elon.edu or 278-7247.

Tuesday, November 11th

5:45 Meet the Chefs

6:00pm Battle Begins

7:00pm Judging

@ Harden Residential Restaurant