

Breaking through the bubble

Millionaire Durst found innocent in Texas on charge of murdering friend

GALVESTON, Texas – New York millionaire Robert Durst was found innocent Tuesday of the murder of his friend and neighbor Morris Black, 71. According to CNN, Durst had been accused of shooting Black and then throwing his chopped up body parts into the Galveston Bay. The head of Black is still missing.

CNN reports that Durst said the shooting was an accident and he dismembered the body and fled the state in panic. The killing occurred in September 2001, but Durst was on the loose for six weeks before he was captured in Pennsylvania, according to CNN. Durst is also wanted for questioning about the disappearance of his first wife and another friend.

The prosecution claims Durst was trying to take over Morris' identity to avoid questions about his involvement in his first wife's disappearance.

According to CNN, after six weeks of testimony, including four days of Durst's, the jury deliberated only five days before returning the verdict. CNN reports that Durst is currently still being held in jail for a bail jumping charge.

Monarch Butterflies expected to become endangered in 50 years due to temperature

A study in the "Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences" released this week reports that an expected change in climate in Mexico may cause Monarch Butterflies to become an endangered species, according to CNN.

In the winter, monarchs travel south to spend the winter in a mountain forest outside of Mexico City. The Associated Press reports that the climate in this refuge is expected to become too wet and cold in the next half-century, leaving the monarchs with nowhere safe to spend the winter.

The monarch butterfly is the most common butterfly in North America. According to AP reports, climate experts said that extinction of the monarch butterfly depends on their ability to adapt to the changing weather or find a new place to migrate to in the winter.

These experts also said other animals may be in danger of becoming extinct because of the increase in global temperatures over the next 50 years.

United Nations building in Afghanistan bombed Tuesday; one man wounded

KANDAHAR, Afghanistan – A car bomb exploded outside of the United Nations building late Tuesday afternoon, damaging it and the electoral offices next door, according to CNN.

U.N. officials were told to stay home from work but officials did not reveal who they suspected to be behind the attack.

At least one man was wounded in the attack. He was seen being carried away in a stretcher on footage from Afghani television news, reports CNN.

Coalition forces are said to be investigating the attack for which no one has yet claimed responsibility.

Compiled by Jessica Kemp

HOMECOMING 2003

Congratulations to all of the event winners!

Banner Contest:

Alpha Chi Omega
Pi Kappa Phi
North Area

Overall Winner: Alpha Chi Omega

2nd Place: Alpha Omicron Pi
3rd Place: North Area

Quiz Bowl

Alpha Omicron Pi
Kappa Sigma
Danieley Center

Skit Night

North Area
Center For Leadership
and Organization Development
Sigma Kappa

Pep Rally

Alpha Chi Omega
Alpha Omicron Pi
Center for Leadership
and Organization Development

Penny Wars

Alpha Chi Omega
Alpha Omicron Pi
Danieley Center

Walk and Talk

Epsilon Sigma Alpha
Service Learning Community
Alpha Chi Omega

SGA

We Work For You