THIS WEEK IN HISTORY - PAUL PARSONS NAMED DEAN

Seventeen years ago, Paul Parsons became the first dean of the School of Communications.

Though stepping down as the dean of the School of Communications, Paul Parsons has left a firm stamp on Elon's history since being named dean this week in 2001.

Parsons formerly spearheaded the Miller School of Journalism and Mass Communications at Kansas State University. He originally joined the faculty at Kansas State in 1985, serving as the associate director from 1989 to 1997, then becoming the head of the Miller School.

Lambert had high hopes for Parsons' tenure as dean. "I am very pleased with the selection of a new dean,"

Lambert said. "It's my hope that the new dean, together with the faculty, will shape a distinctive identity for our newly formed School of Communications."

Parsons was also optimistic about joining Elon as the dean of the School of Communications.

"I instinctively felt that Elon's vision for the School of Communications and my background and skills fit together extremely well," Parsons said. "Elon's School of Communications already is an outstanding place. My role is to lead the faculty toward making it even better."

NEW DEAN

In 2001, Paul Parsons began his term as dean of the School of Communications.

NEWS BRIEFS

SURF celebrates 25 years

Students, faculty and staff gathered in the Great Hall on April 24 to present and discuss in-depth undergraduate research that spanned across various departments and disciplines on campus.

This year marks the 25th anniversary of the Spring Undergraduate Research Forum (SURF) created to give students, their mentors and other faculty the opportunity to showcase their in-depth research and other students, faculty and staff the opportunity to participate in the research through dialogue. To ensure students and faculty are able to attend the presentations, Elon University suspends classes for the day.

The first SURF Day was held in the Carlton Building in 1993. Kathy Lyday, professor of English, was one of the original driving forces behind organizing the first SURF Day, alongside 1993 students and 13 faculty members.

"We started SURF because we thought it would be a good idea to have the honors students to have experience presenting research before graduation," Lyday said, reflecting on the first SURF Day. "We wanted research extended and expected in the arts and sciences."

2018 Lumen Scholars announced

Fifteen rising juniors at Elon University were named as the recipients of the 2018 Lumen Prize, an award that comes with a $20,000 scholarship to go toward funding their academic research.

Lumen Scholars work closely with their project mentors over two years to complete their in-depth projects. Some of the aspects of such projects include research on and off campus, study abroad, internships, program development, creative productions and performances and relevant coursework.

The name is a direct derivative of Elon's tried and true model of "Lumen Lumen," which translates from Latin to mean "spiritual light" and "intellectual light." The words can be found on the Elon University seal.

The recipients of the prize include Amanda Bingaman, Isabel Blanco Araujo, Grace Carter, Morgan Collins, Colin Deutsch, Jordan Devries, Sarah Dolce, Mary Emmerling, Caroline Enright, Avery Hatch, Yasmeen Lee, Jonathan Martinez, Arianne Payne, Nicole Plante and Amanda Ruvolo.

School of Education inducts new members into honor society

On April 19, 23 undergraduate and graduate students of the School of Education were inducted into the Sigma Gamma chapter of Kappa Delta Pi at Elon University, the international honor society in education that promotes and holds the highest quality of education in the teaching profession.

At Elon, members must uphold academic excellence with a minimum GPA of 3.6 and have recommendations from three teacher education faculty.

Ann Bullock, dean of the School of Education, presided over the ceremony while Stephen Byrd, associate professor of education, organized the event.

Bullock ended the ceremony by reiterating the organization's motto, "to serve that each day may enhance the growth of exploring minds; so live that we may guide young and old to know the truth and love the right." To the fulfillment of these objectives, we pledge our efforts.
