CORRECTIONS

NEWS

In the article titled "Mourning parents campaign for hazing legislation," Elon News Network misstated the numbers regarding the hazing ritual, "The Gauntlet." The ritual requires participants to drink 18 alcoholic beverages in 82 minutes.

In the article titled "Concert breaks records but brings up new concerns," Elon News Network printed two mistakes. All three artists were decided on at the same time, and the stage construction is not the majority of the production costs.

LIFESTYLE

In the article titled "Woofstock Festival embraces downtown Burlington," Elon News Network misstated Pamela Notchey's position. She is the director of the Humane Society of Alamance County.

THIS MONTH IN HISTORY - PRESIDENTIAL VISIT

OCT. 1, 1998. This month in history, the final presidential candidates Leo Lambert and Thomas Flynn visited campus to meet with students, faculty and staff to get a feel for the Elon campus and community.

In October 1998, Flynn was the acting president at Millikin University in Decatur, Illinois. "We have the Elon experiences. Now it's time to look at the Elon expectations," Flynn said.

Meanwhile, Lambert was the provost and vice chancellor for academic affairs at the University of Wisconsin-LaCrosse. "Elon is truly a great college and more people need to know about it," Lambert said.

Both candidates met with then-President Fred Young, members of the SGA, staff, administrators and faculty. Both candidates studied and commented on the Academic Summit and the goals the university had set for itself in the future.

Flynn and Lambert both said they would need a year or two to get used to Elon and the college community before they would consider making major changes.

Lambert went on to win the presidential race and served as Elon's eighth president from 1999 to 2018.
