

Do you foresee any points of friction between the SGA and administration?

It seems that there have been points of friction in the last year and I don't foresee any great change in that. Hopefully, the administration will see things more as the students see them and try more to help them-- and not try to impress the world at large in improvements in tangible things. The intangible aspect of education is most important.

What is the Vice-President's function?

The Vice-President presides at Senate meetings, sees that they are carried out well and to take over in the event the President is incapacitated.

I also think it is his duty to appoint committees subsidiary to him and to investigate those areas in the SGA which he feels merit investigation. The government as set up now has apparently no check and balance system because the Vice-President hasn't the power to investigate the executive or honor court branch. The chief executive is the only one who has this power and I think it should be extended to the Vice-President.

If elected, I will try to have this done. The executive branch, in all equity, can be wrong and need investigation as well as any other branch.

In closing, I feel the SGA must keep working for a better Elon. I would hate to see this year's progress end this year.

C. V. MAY

Why do you want to run for this particular office?

To me, this office is the most important of the SGA offices. It has to be representative of dignity, honor, and a knowledge of SGA procedures. I believe that I can handle this office as it should be handled. Also, the SGA President must see and understand the needs of the students. I have my own convictions as to what should be done; however, if I am elected, I will be the representative of the student and my convictions will be used only as a factor in deciding what should be presented and not in censoring the opinion of the students.

What suggestions do you have regarding the SGA in general and more specifically regarding the office for which you have filed as a candidate?

There are several suggestions. One is concerned with this problem of lack of communication. To prescribe exactly how this problem will be overcome would be too idealistic right now. One of my major aims in this office would be to relieve this lack of communications. Also, there is a span of difference between the dormitory and the commuter student. I believe that something should be done to draw the dormitory and the commuter student closer together. This will be one problem that, if solved, will tend to reduce the general apathy and complacency of the student body.