

diploma as a reward to those who have cheated, along with those who earned it honestly. This is an unforgiveable double-standard, and those who contribute to its existence are not worthy of any respect or of the positions they hold. It takes real strength for a student to advocate honesty when he knows he follows in footsteps such as these.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor:

You definitely must be a narrow-minded, prejudiced person. I take it, after reading your two-bit magazine, that you have never played any sport or taken time to see what training our boys go through.

The football jocks practice from two to six five days a week and play a hard-fought game on Saturday. There are very few people in this world who can go through four hours of training in the afternoon, classes in the morning, and then be expected to stay up all night studying to make a passing mark on a test the next day. Sure, they have help, but they deserve it.
