Seniors Active In Off the Campus Student Teaching

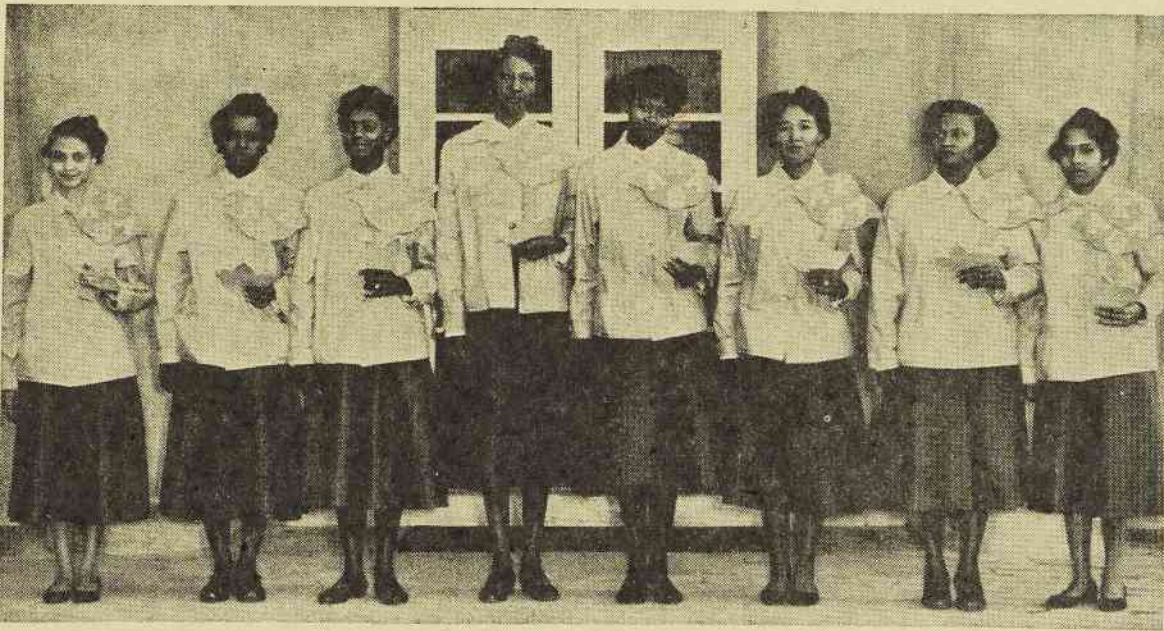

The off-campus practice teaching program at the Fayetteville State Teachers College is in full swing with a total of 15 senior students participating. Eight of them teach under supervision at the local Edwards Evans Elementary School, two at the North Street, and five at the Washington Drive Junior High School. One objective of the program is to place prospective teachers in positions on the field where they can see expert teaching in progress and in turn can get both the practice and the feel of doing it themselves. The work extends throughout the day for a period of 12 weeks.

Conferences for student teachers are scheduled two days a week for an hour. In these group meetings, the students discuss their problems, plan units together, discuss report forms, observe supplementary materials, evaluate teaching techniques and discuss current professional books and pamphlets. Time is given for work periods, for demonstrations, and for the learning of needed skills.

The reaction of the students themselves to the work may point up both its character and its educational value. One student was impressed by the manner in which "one proceeds to find the best method for a particular class"; another saw virtue in the "periodic conferences to which one may bring the problems he has encountered," and still another insisted that she was not aware that there was so much to be learned about teaching anyway. "I think I will like teaching as a career," one man concluded, "but it requires work to no end."

The supervisor of the program is Vivian O. Windley, formerly Supervisor of Negro Elementary Schools in Wake County, N. C.

Fayetteville "Y" In Candle-Lighting Ceremony Nov. 12

The annual candle-lighting service in recognition of the new "Y" members was sponsored by the local Young Women's Christian Association Sunday, November 12 beginning at six o'clock in the Seabrook Auditorium. The guest speaker was Anne Queen of the American Friends Service Committee in Greensboro. She insisted that the YWCA carry forward its work today with as much zeal as was evidenced in the early decades of its existence. She was introduced by presiding officer Elizabeth McArthur, chairman of the local Committee on World Affairs.

Joyce Brame, local president, read the scripture, gave the invocation, and conducted the ceremony. More than 50 new members were inducted into the "Circle of Light."

Current members of the "Y" cabinet are Joyce Brame, president; Elizabeth McArthur, chairman, Committee on World Affairs; Betty Payne, chairman, Program Committee; Nettie Coston, chairman, Community Committee; Lucille Leake, chairman, Membership Committee; Eliza Bullock, chairman, Finance Committee; Betty Pettaway, chairman, Social Service Committee; Jean Baker, vice president; Ruby Hill, recording secretary; Nina Baten, chairman, Worship Committee; Velma Malloy, chairman, Publicity Committee; Mildred McIntyre, chairman, Music Committee. E. Louise Murphy of the Area of Social Science, is the sponsor.

4-H Club's Annual Achievement Day Held November 10

Approximately 500 4-H Club members from all of Cumberland County attended their annual 4-H Achievement Day program which was held in the auditorium of Fayetteville State Teachers College, November 10 at 11:45 a. m., according to B. T. McNeill and M. H. LeGrand, Negro extension agents.

Richelean Roundtree, newly elected County Council president, presided over the program and songs were led by Bronnie McLaurin, council song leader from Armstrong 4-H Club.

The group was welcomed to the college by Dr. Rudolph Jones, dean of State Teachers College. A welcome from the clubs was given by Eva McDonald, Seabrook 4-H Club. Special music was furnished by the Ann Chesnut High School Glee Club.

R. E. Davenport, manager of Sycamore Dairy, delivered the main address after being presented by Alexander Powell of Armstrong 4-H Club No. 2.

Mrs. Mae R. Williams, County School Supervisor, presented the awards to outstanding 4-H Club members.

Other numbers on the program included the 4-H Pledge led by Perepper Baker of Swans Creek Club; devotions were led by Club No. 2; the Purpose, by James Robinson, Armstrong Club No. 1; County 4-H Summary, by Maggie Gale Murphy, Wade 4-H Club; roll call, Hickory Shade 4-H Club;

ELEVEN F.S.T.C. STUDENTS ELECTED TO "WHO'S WHO"

Eleven top-ranking students at Fayetteville State Teachers College were recently notified that their names had been listed in the 1955-1956 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities," a publication whose scope is national. As in other years, the selections were limited to upper-classmen, there being five seniors and six juniors in the group.

Current selections were based upon excellence in scholarship, campus leadership, and citizenship records.

This year's roster of "State" students who enjoy the distinction of having their names included with the leading students in other American colleges and universities follows: Maxine R. Andrews, Fayetteville; Willie J. Carter, Fayetteville; Betsy A. Currie, Raeford; Lillian L. Dorsette, Wilmington; Melba B. Johnson, Warrenton; Elizabeth R. McArthur, Maxton; Edith Walker, Fayetteville; Novella T. Whitted, Lumberton; Robert F. Williams, Clinton; Richard Woods, Newark, N. J.; and Lucie A. Wright, Wilmington.

Of the eleven students honored, one comes from out of the state and three reside in Fayetteville. This is the fifth year that students at the Fayetteville State Teachers College have been listed in "Who's Who."

4-H Report, W. C. Hodges, Adult 4-H Club leader of Route 1, Hope Mills.

A tour of the campus was held for club members following refreshments which were served by the Sycamore Dairy of Fayetteville.

A special feature of the program was the installation ceremony for County Council officers by M. H. LeGrand, Negro home agent.

Organized clubs in the county are Lewis Chapel, Ann Chestnut, Ashley, Swans Creek, Seabrook, Armstrong, Wade, and Hickory Shade.
