

DR. ROBINSON IS SPEAKER AT SOCIETY CONVOCATION

Addressing himself to the topic, "The Role of the Scholar in a Changing Order," Dr. Leonard H. Robinson was the guest speaker at the convocation of the Rho Beta Chi Chapter of the Alpha Kappa Mu National Honor Scholarship Society at the Fayetteville State Teachers College Monday. Dr. Robinson is a former instructor at the Fayetteville State Teachers College and is currently chairman of the Department of Social Sciences at the North Carolina Agricultural and Technical College at Greensboro. He was introduced by Mildred McIntyre, a senior of Cheraw, S. C.

Four members, all juniors, were tapped into Alpha Kappa Mu as result of their consistently high scholarship and citizenship records. They include Betsy A. Currie of Raeford; Mary W. Robinson of Roxboro; Beatrice J. Smith of Wilmington; and Edith M. Walker of Fayetteville. The induction ceremonies were conducted by Lillian Dorsette, a senior, and Maxine Andrews made the citation to the students who had acquired "Dean's List" standing for the past fall and winter quarters. The affair was closed by the singing of the Alpha Kappa Mu Hymn.

The roster of persons, all seniors, currently holding membership in Rho Beta Chi include Maxine Andrews of Fayetteville; Willie J. Carter of Fayetteville; Lillian Dor-

Extravaganza Features Strong Local Talent

The Hood Hall Dormitory Association of Fayetteville State Teachers College sponsored a Benefit Extravaganza entitled "Theatrical Varieties" Saturday, April 21, in the J. W. Seabrook Auditorium.

Exceptional talent from the Cumberland County and City Schools, Fort Bragg Military Reservation, and State Teachers College appeared on the show. The interpretive dancing of "Delightful" Doris Simms, popular American and Latin-American dances by dancers from the famed Bragg Boulevard Arthur Murray School of Dancing, and popular William Doane singing his potential number one hit song, "Restriction Blues," were some of the attractions.

This show had great variety, and certainly appealed to all persons present. Proceeds from the performance went to the Scholarship Fund.

The Gilreath Club

After being reorganized in the fall, the Gilreath Club has had a favorable year. We have accomplished some of our goals by presenting discussions to the student body and having discussions that were of interest to the Gilreath Society. One of the discussions was led by Donald West; in it he compared modern jazz to jazz of the past. This proved to be an enlightening discussion and was enjoyed by all members of the society.

The Gilreath Club has sponsored such timely discussions as "The I.C.C. Ruling and Its Effect" and "The Autherine Lucy Case and the Bus Boycott." During the meeting of the NADSA Conference, the Gilreath members sponsored and participated in a discussion on "Has Integration Gone Too Far Too Fast?" These discussions have aided in helping the students keep informed about the struggle for integration.

In the last weeks, the Gilreath Society has sponsored a political party which has candidates running for student government president and vice-president. This party, "The Progressives," is open to all members of the student body and it should enable each student to practice real-life voting processes.

Plans are also in the making for a spring carnival to be held May 25. Save your pennies, fellows! There'll be a Kissing Booth!

—Ethel Moragne, Reporter

sette of Wilmington; Clea Fowlkes of Lillington; Elizabeth McArthur of Maxton; and Mildred McIntyre of Cheraw, S. C.

Lorena C. Carter of the Area of Education is faculty advisor.

MEMBERS OF PROBLEMS IN SCHOOL LUNCHROOM MANAGEMENT

Left to right: Arthur Jean Baker, Frances Renee Washington, Winifred Darlenio Shaffer, Willie Jane Carter, Yvonne Williams and Maxine Roslyn Wright.

The group of graduating seniors shown above is a segment of the class in Problems in School Lunchroom Management, who recently visited two of the county schools to observe and to obtain firsthand information concerning the school lunch which would be valuable to them and their classmates as beginning teachers. Other members of the class not shown who visited city schools are Willie Ray Alston, Eliza Bullock, Clea Nell Fowlkes and Emma Reese Kenan at Washington Drive Junior High School; Mrs. Isadora Coachman at Edward Evans Elementary School; Charles Allen, Hazel Scott, and Eloise Weaver Jackson at North Street School; Fannie Ann Hunter, Gelora McNeill Wilson, and Violet Yellowdy at Newbold Training School.

These visits, together with library and classroom projects, including an animal feeding experiment, have been utilized as means of acquainting beginning teachers with some of the problems which arise among malnourished pupils in school. Recent surveys show that the greatest amount of improvement in children's eating habits can be achieved if efforts are begun early. Since American children spend a greater portion of their day at school, their participation in the National School Lunch Program is a very important part of their education as all subjects taught in school can be correlated with learnings in the school cafeteria. It is our philosophy that the teacher, if actively interested in the well-being and health status of his or her charges, can be the source of increasing pupils' participation which will ultimately carry over into their homes.

Two Art Instructors Attend Opening of Museum in Raleigh

Among the many art scholars and critics from several states and from abroad in attendance at the banquet and other glitter and fanfare at the Sir Walter Hotel celebrating the opening of the North Carolina Art Museum at Raleigh, were Helen T. Chick and Florence

DELTA MEMBERS—Some of the members of the Delta Xi of Delta Sigma Theta Sorority. Reading left to right, front row—Annie Wells, treasurer, Cedar Grove; Shirley Wynn, recording secretary, Ahoskie; Vera Mills, vice president, Nashville; Betsy Currie, president, Rockfish; Julia Kelly, journalist, Rennett; Marlene Pittman, corresponding secretary, Oxford; second row—Joyce Brame, Henderson; Marion Porter, Conway, S. C.; Nettie Costen, Teachey; Perbena Pierce, Fayetteville; Violet Yellowdy, Zebulon; third row—Eliza Bullock, Manson; Edythe Harrison, Nashville; Velma Lavendar, Josephine McRae, Fayetteville; fourth row—Vera Smith, Fayetteville; Vivian Bennett, Wallace; Lucy A. Wright, Wilmington; Mavis Jones, Goldston; fifth row—Florine Williams, Chapel Hill.

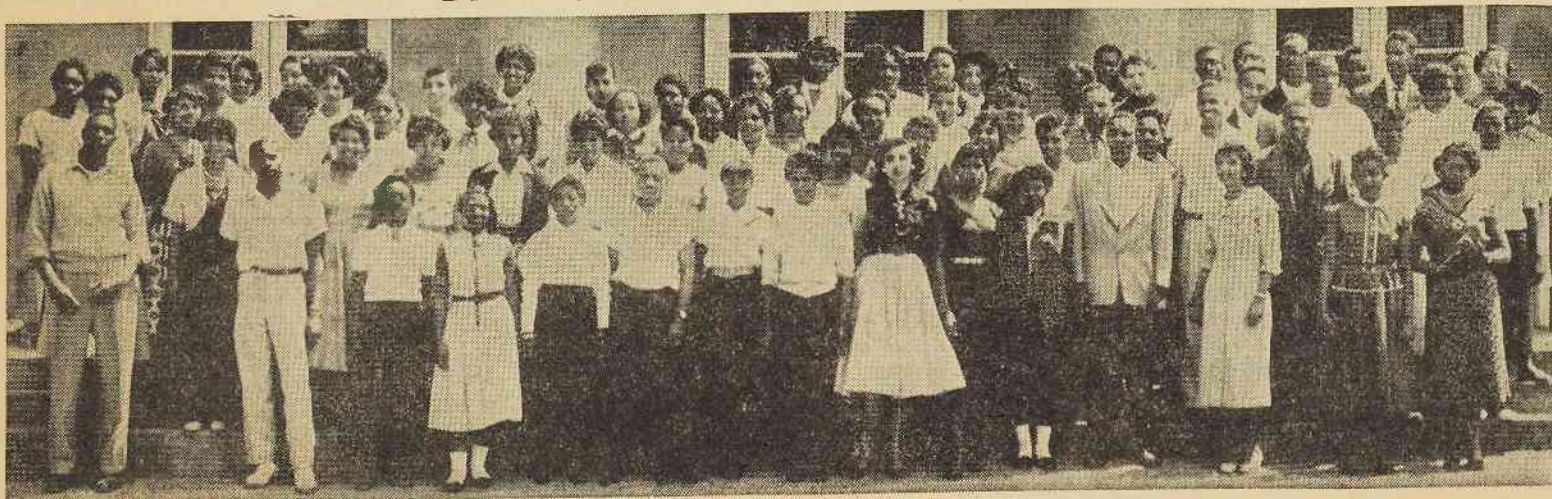

DEAN R. JONES

It has been a pleasure this year as always for my office to serve the faculty and students of FSTC. We are living at a time when it is increasingly important that students invest their time wisely if they are to assume their rightful places in the society of tomorrow. May I earnestly urge all students to take advantage of every opportunity to increase your factual knowledge. May I also urge you to make a sincere effort to practice scientific thinking. Unless we acquire more knowledge and learn to think logically we shall not be able to compete successfully in the days ahead.

I wish for all members of the college family a profitable and happy vacation. We shall look forward to your return in September.

—R. Jones, Dean

DAY - STUDENT ORGANIZATION

P. Eaton of the Area of Music and Fine Arts at Fayetteville State Teachers College. Both have been teaching and working in the field of art for many years, and both hold membership in the North Carolina Art Society and the National Art Society.

In 1955, Mrs. Chick sent paintings to the Virginia State College Art Exhibition and has contributed articles to Junior Arts and Activities and other art journals.

In addition to her painting, Miss Eaton has turned traveler. In 1948, she studied Art in Mexico and in Guatamala and last year she made the tour with the University of Minnesota group which carried her to France, Italy, Germany, Austria, and Amsterdam.