A great number of baseball fans don't know that they owe the traditional seventh-inning stretch to a kink in a Presidential back.

It seems that when William Howard Taft was President he got that kink in his back at an opening game in Washington. So he stood up to work it out. Everybody, thinking the President was leaving, stood up too. And that's how a baseball tradition was born.

"How's Smith doing in the high jump? Any good?"
"Naw, he can hardly clear his throat."

Broncos' Second Invitational

The Broncos held their Second Annual Invitational Track Meet on Saturday, April 28. The participating teams were: Elizabeth City Teachers College, Livingstone College, Shaw University, Saint Augustine's College, Saint Paul's College and Fayetteville State Teachers College.

The Broncos had nine first place and five second place finishers for an overall point total of 71, almost twice the amount that runnerup Livingstone College possessed. The leading cindersmen for the Broncos were: R. Dobbins, Sam Maxwell, Dave Christian, J. Elliott, D. Austin, Willie Sessoms, and J. Hill. A large crowd turned out in the 80-plus degree weather to witness the exciting meet.

Trophies were awarded to: Fayetteville State, first; Livingstone, second; and Elizabeth City, third. Ribbons were received by trackmen finishing first through fourth, relay teams included.

"Well, son," asked the father, "how are your marks at college?"
"Under water," was the cryptic response.
"And what do you mean by that?" persisted the parent.
"Well," said the son reluctantly, "they're all below C level."

Summer Leisure

magazines are edited to amuse rather than to improve the jaded mind of the casual reader.

In addition; most books (about 80 per cent) that circulate from libraries are fiction, although the number of biographies, books of travel, and books of science that are read for pleasure is increasing each year. The radio and the motion picture are, for the most part, devoted to entertainment.

Each recreation takes the form of physical activity. For young people athletics fill an important place in the recreational program.

Many people develop hobbies which provide recreation. Some collect postage stamps, coins, Indian arrowheads, stones or shells, old books, photographs, or other objects. Any hobby may have considerable recreational value.

Many of the things that people call recreation do not re-create. Recreation may be constructive or destructive. Constructive recreation leaves a person with a better mental attitude, a clearer mind, a higher purpose, and a greater efficiency than he possessed before.

Destructive types of recreation leave a person less efficient mentally, morally, and physically. Recreation that takes the form of drinking, the use of drugs, or debauchery of any sort is not real recreation; it is of doubtful benefit.

Strive to gain the greatest possible benefit from YOUR summer leisure.

During exams at college, the student was having a difficult time with the economics exam. A particular question had him completely stumped and, after considering it for some time, he finally penciled a notation below the question, which read: "This doesn't ring a bell."

When he received his exam paper back, the professor had written directly below the student's note: "Ding Dong — Page 258."
