FSC Self-Study In Process

FSC HOSTS SELF-STUDY OFFICIAL - Fayetteville State College hosted Dr. Eldridge Scales (left) Director of Special Studies, Commissions on Colleges, Southern Association of Colleges and Schools, on November 8. Dr. Scales' visit was in conjunction with the college's Self-Study which is now in progress. With Dr. Scales (left to right) are Mrs. D. W. Bishop, steering committee member; Mrs. C. S. Thompson, Director, FSC Self-Study; and President Rudolph Jones.

MASSEY NAMED DEVELOPING OFFICER

Fayetteville - Robert A. Massey has been named Acting Development Officer at Fayetteville State College, President Rudolph Jones announced recently.

Dr. Jones said that the Development position was created to strengthen the college's position in seeking additional support from private sources. "Despite their many contributions to society, public institutions similar to Fayetteville State College, are "forgotten colleges" when it comes to private support. Because public institutions are not included in the United Negro College Fund, they are cut off from the major source of corporate and foundation support. Almost all of our revenue comes from state and student sources," Dr. Jones said. Massey will coordinate the college's solicitation of funds from alumni, friends, business, industry, and foundations. Such funds as may be raised will be deposited with the Fayetteville State College Foundation for endowment, scholarships, loans, faculty improvement, visiting faculty, cultural enrichment, and facilities.

THE New FSC

BY LOU BAKER

What were a mere conglomeration of horizontal and vertical markings three or four years ago, are now standing structures adding to both the facility and beauty of F.S.C.'s campus. The one time etchings have left the planning tables, and to the delight of students and staff, have become scintillating landmarks on the grounds.

Four plants display the magical transition. The Rosenthal Building, the new Chesnut Library, the new women's gym and the new Science Annex. The former two dazzle the eye with their modern Spanish look, split-leveled spacing, low, flat toppings,

TEACHER OF THE MONTH

FSC Grad Honored

Gerald C. Patterson, a 1967 F. S. C. graduate, was named "Teacher of the Month" by the staff of THE FALCON, Seventy-First High School's student paper.

Mr. Patterson is one of their fine biology teachers and is very well liked by the students and faculty. Mr. Patterson is beginning his second year at Seventy-First and he "digs" teaching.

Mr. Patterson was born on April 19, 1947 (he wishes this date to be kept secret) and was reared right here in Cumberland County. He went to Anne Chesnut High School. As a child, Mr. Patterson had "fun" as he put it. During his high school days, he participated in basketball and baseball. In his senior year, he was captain of the basketball team. Mr. Patterson was also in The National Honor Society and sang in the chorus for four years. Mr. Patterson was second in his graduating class. He then went on to conquer Fayetteville State College, majoring in biology. He played baseball for one year and was in the college choir for two years. After college, Mr. Patterson went to Seventy-First. He hopes to go back to college and do post-grad work and maybe "pick up" his M. A.

There at Seventy-First Mr. Patterson is sponsor of the Photo Club. Last summer, he worked as dormitory director at Fayetteville State College.

When asked what he thought of Seventy-First, Mr. Patterson replied, "It's a great school; one of the best anywhere. Seventy-First is growing rapidly in academic standards and in athletic powers."

Mr. Patterson's hobbies include a lot of reading and he enjoys all of the major sports. He also goes "wild" over soul music, especially Aretha Franklin and Percy Sledge.

Merry Christmas

I'M WAITING FOR CHRISTMAS
BY LEON DOCKERY

I'm waiting for Christmas
At the very brink of time,
For now the soul's uplifted
That here my friends I find,
What merry day, what merry day
Shall come to be this tempest,
Now pray for me is my request
That Christmas meets me at my best,
For I'm to render songs of joy,
A hallowed speech at my mentor's word,
Though neither such have you heard,
But what is rendered you'll enjoy.
Listen to hear a Christmas chorus
Singing songs of angelic deeds
Of Jesus' birth for his master's pleasing,
Though really for the sake of us,
Born on that good, good day.
Bring to him of recitations
I say to children down my way,
Be first to make your presentations,
for the hour is getting late.

hovering near the earth, and sleek cornices and bright sandstones interspersed to blend with the spreading veranda-like entrances and steps. The latter two, bold and bulky in the manner of Gothic structures are marked by their unique-reddish grey bricks, tinted with sandstone etchings and Germanic windows, the former enabling them to blend faintly with Rosenthal and Chesnut.

The buildings reflect the new F. S. C.'s progress in reaching for higher standards, better teachers and methods.

The new library is pictured below left; the new science building is shown at the right.
