CHANCELLOR ADDRESSES '75 FALL FACULTY AND STAFF CONFERENCE

Chancellor Lyons Addresses Fall Conference

(Editor's note: Dr. Charles "A" Lyons, Jr., Chancellor of Fayetteville State University, recently addressed the fall conference at FSU. Included below are excerpts from his address.)

I am pleased to add my personal word of greeting and welcome to all of us as we begin the 1975 academic year. For those who are returning to their posts after a period of respite and change of pace we are happy to see you. For those who are joining us for the first time we extend to you a hearty welcome and trust that you will find here unlimited opportunities for service and a good measure of joy and satisfaction in your work. For those who are returning home after a brief period away from home base we bid you a special welcome home. We especially welcome Dr. Rudolph Jones back home after a six year absence. It is a course of real personal pleasure for me to welcome him and have him rejoin our family.

Our theme, Improving Instruction, is timely and meshes well with our efforts at improving and making more efficient institutional management.

I want, rather to devote some time and attention to the institutional environment and climate within which instruction must take place. For example, instruction can be hampered by worry and frustration over budget, supplies and materials, cleanliness of building, and area wholesome human relationship. Thus, the way the institution is organized and managed can help to improve instruction.

The mission of Fayetteville State University, a constituent institution of the University of North Carolina, is to provide opportunity for every member of the University to develop, enhance, and use the techniques of intellectual inquiry. The University aims to assist each student in his pursuit of truth through the transmission and advancement of all knowledge.

Fayetteville State University believes that each student who matriculates here should be provided every opportunity to be successful in the acquisition of the abilities to read comprehensively, write clearly, speak effectively and think critically and analytically. Our aim is to assist each student, in every way possible, to acquire the skills, the knowledge, the sensitivities and the understandings that will help him to become a competent, productive and contributing citizen.

The University sees its mission as four-fold:

1. To provide excellent undergraduate programs in Arts and Sciences, Teacher Education and Business Administration to all persons
