BOND ISSUE

A lot is at stake March 23. On this date voters throughout the state will be asked to approve various higher education capital improvement bonds.

Tar Heel voters will decide by vote to approve over $43 million in capital improvement bonds for state-supported institutions and Fayetteville State University is included in this sum.

Fayetteville State, if the bond is approved, will get a $4 million science building complex, a very badly needed item for the campus.

People of this community and surrounding areas will definitely benefit from such a science facility at FSU.

Not only will this new building enhance the programs already in existence at FSU, but new programs can be utilized plus expansion of existing ones.

Students are encouraged to vote and get parents, friends, and neighbors to vote "Yes" on March 23.

Dean J. C. Jones, FSU Dean of Students, is campus coordinator for the Bond Issue, please contact his office for further information.

Chancellor Lyons, along with other chancellors of state-supported institutions benefiting from the bond referendum March 23, urge your support and the support of the entire state in this most important issue affecting higher education in North Carolina.
