Over the Summer

There have been many changes in the administration of Fayetteville State this summer as Chancellor Lloyd "Vic" Hackley brings in his own people to head some of the major areas of the university. It should also be noted that Chancellor Hackley is reassigning some of the personnel already holding positions at the University.

One of the most notable changes is in the newly renamed area of Student Affairs, formerly known as Student Development. Both the Vice Chancellor and the Associate Vice Chancellor announced their resignation. Dr. Harold Nixon, Vice Chancellor, left FSU to assume the position of Vice President for Student Affairs at Wright State University in Dayton, Ohio. Associate Vice Chancellor Wilma Henry left to pursue an assistant deanship at Wright State University in Dayton, Ohio. Well placed sources indicate that Dr. Henry was going to be asked to serve as an interim Vice Chancellor, replacing Dr. Nixon while a search was conducted. Sources within Student Affairs say that Dr. Henry considered this offer "insulting".

Replacing Dr. Nixon as Vice Chancellor is Dr. Henry "Hank" Gardner who served as Associate Dean for Developmental Education. Dr. Glenna Witt Sexton, Associate Dean for Student Support Services, has been promoted to Associate Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs.

During the last academic year, Vice Chancellor for Institutional Development, Dr. James Carson quietly announced his resignation and with equal stealth left the university. Chancellor Hackley seized this opportunity to reorganize the division and give it a new name. The division is now known as University Advancement is headed by a new Vice Chancellor, Dr. Joe Monroe. Dr. Denise Mahone, formerly the director of Institutional Research, has been named to the newly created position of Associate Vice Chancellor for University Advancement.

In Academic Affairs, the "University College" has been created by the Hackley administration. Under Chancellor Hackley's Academic Advancement Plan, all new students will be assigned to the University College for the first two years. Before a student can declare a major and proceed to the upper level, the student will have to pass departmental tests to insure that they have obtained a level of knowledge that will allow them to be successful in their chosen major. Dr. Harry Ghee, former Executive Assistant to the Chancellor, has been named to head this area. Other appointments in Academic Affairs include: Dr. James Dixon, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences; Dr. Barry Haber, Dean of the School of Business and Economics; and Dr. Bertha Miller, Dean of the School of Education.

Other new appointments include Dr. Betty Lovelace as the new Director of Student Activities/Student Center. Dr. Lovelace replaces Dr. Irving Veazie who left FSU earlier this year.

As Chancellor Hackley becomes completely settled in his relatively new role as Chancellor, a job he has held for only ten months, it is very likely that other appointments and promotions will occur.

UNC Sponsors Summer Research For FSU Students

Four students from FSU attended a Minority Pre-Graduate summer research. The students were: James E. Raynor, Jr., a senior biology major; Wanda Williams, a senior biology major; Sandra Sutton, a senior psychology major; and Larnell Dunkley, a senior English major. These students worked in either the laboratory or library to gather information concerning their research and composed this data into a final paper that was required by the Director of the program.

This program was designed to give students the opportunity to see what graduate school will be like and to increase the number of minority students in predominantly white graduate schools. The students had the opportunity to study and work with students from other universities and the black graduate students at UNC Chapel Hill.
