Phil Hart 12 points and senior guard Kenny Sumblin 10.5.

Capel said Monday that three Broncos no longer are on the team. John McFadden, a starter who was averaging 11 points a game, is academically ineligible, Capel said. Starter Rahman Karim was dropped from the team and reserve Rodney Davis decided not to play because of personal reasons.

"This is like a second life to us," Capel said, alluding to the CIAA tournament, a 14-team field that included defending NCAA Division II national champion N. C. Central (21-3). "Stability is what Mark (assistant coach Mark Cline) and I want to bring to FSU. The last four years have been tough on the players and the student body." FSU has known three coaches in that time.

In other CIAA tournament games scheduled for today, Winston-Salem State (14-11) faces Bowie State (2-24) at 9 a.m. Elizabeth City State (5-21) meets Shaw (18-8) at 11, followed by the FSU Hampton game. Livingstone (1-25) plays Norfolk State (22-3) at 3, Johnson C. Smith (15-11) meets St. Paul's (14-13) at 7 and St. Augustine's (8-14) faces Virginia State (12-14) at 9.

N. C. Central and Virginia Union (26-1) received first-round byes. Quarterfinal play is scheduled for Thursday, the semifinals Friday and the championship on Saturday at 8 p.m.

Jeff Capel has coached in the Dean Dome.

He has spent his time at Reynolds Coliseum, Cameron Indoor Stadium and Cole Field House.

He's been all along Tobacco Road.

"I don't need to be in the Atlantic Coast Conference," says Capel, who is completing his first season as head coach at Fayetteville State University which is scheduled to play today in the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association basketball tournament in Norfolk, Va.

FSU, 7-19, meets Hampton Institute, 15-10, at 1 p.m. in The Scope. Hampton defeated FSU 74-58 in an earlier contest that was stopped with 3:06 remaining because of a fight. Three Hampton players and FSU's Chuck Brown were placed on probation.

Capel says the Hampton incident will serve as a motivating factor because the game was closer than the final score indicated.

The Broncos are led by Odis Bellinger, a 6-foot-4 senior guard who is averaging 17.5 points and 6.5 rebounds per game. Junior guard Darrell Armstrong averages 13.5 points per game, sophomore guard
