We the members of the 1970 Flag Football team would like to thank Coach Jim Bennett for his time and efforts he has given to us. Although we were not champs this season, he has taught us to be winners. He has also taught us to be men by accepting our defeats and getting ready to tackle the problem when it presents itself again.

In a large institution protest affords some students one of the relatively few ways of being noticed, Professor Hodgkinson points out. In a large university, 'individuals are bound to feel that they are part of a super

Cheerleaders

Each fall, the Wayne College Community cheerleaders are selected on the basis of enthusiasm, coordination, and leadership. These students, with the help of their advisor, Mrs. Lancaster, work hard to promote the wellknown WCC spirit. Not only do they cheer at games, but they also spend many hours practicing their cheers, making signs to publicize games, and promoting support for the teams among the students.

Whether the game results in joyful victory or heartbreaking defeat, the cheerleaders are dedicated to the support of the Bisons. Under the direction of Head cheerleaders, Diane Butler and Jenny Gordon, the following students will lead the crowd in the yell for the victory: Pam Johnson, Jacqueline McMillan, Billy Jean Ward, Micy Gonzales, Bonnie Waddell, Karen Zuckerman, Darlene Britt, and - for the girls to look at- David Adams and Wayne Williams.

system and that they have little power in relation to it.'

Student involvement in the making of institutionalized policy is not the answer to the problem of student unrest, Dr. Hodgkinson writes. Ironically, student involvement in institutional policy making may actually lead to increased student protest.

Instead he feels that efforts will have to be made by the larger institutions to provide a sense of concern and "selective decentralization" if they are to humanize their campuses and remove some of the causes of student protest.
