EDITORIAL.

INDIFFERENCE.

There is sometimes manifested at Guilford a spirit of don't care.
Some students sit placidly in their rooms while society is in progress, without realizing that they are missing one of the greatest things that college life offers them. Others can see a society prize awarded without once trying to win it because they know it would require effort.

Such students have a tendency to belittle all things to be achieved by hard work. They actually argue that prizes, scholarships and grades are not worth the effort and they are willing to accept defeat without a battle—surrender without a shot. These students evidently have and are cultivating those qualities that are detrimental to success.

In this day of strenuous competition it is the energetic man—the man who works—that wins, and if we hope to have these qualities, when we go forth to cope with men of the world, we must cultivate them here. The cultivation of different habits, if entered into whole-heartedly, would be a pleasure, for it is only the student who doesn't know how to work who does not like it. A student who knows how to work, and works, enjoys it. It is a pleasure to him.

HENRY CLAY SOCIETY NOTES.

On Friday night, February 18, the following officers were installed: L. E. Stuart, president; J. E.
Williams, secretary; F. Townsend, marshal.

The meeting of February 25th was very well attended. The following program was rendered:

Debate, Resolved, that the present administration deserves re-election. Affirmative, Jones, Lloyd and Joe White; negative, Shelton, Valentine, and J. C. Williams.
Lecture—Mason.

The affirmative advanced the argument that the present administration has kept us out of war much longer than previous administrations would have done, and that it would be unwise to change the chief executive in this crisis.

The negative contended that the administration is unworthy of a second term because of the shiftless manner in which it has handled international affairs during the war. They also pointed out men better fitted for the position.

The debate upon the whole was spirited, instructive, and interesting. The negative presented the better outline and won the decisions of both house and judges.

Mason gave an interesting lecture on "Psychology." He related some of the abnormal acts of a morbid mind, due to some unexplainable mental conditions. This number deserves special mention because of the unusual subject and the excellent manner in which it was rendered.

D. Budd and Thompson were called out for an extemporaneous debate. This was short, crisp and humorous.

There being no further business the critic, R. C. Kiser, rendered his report, which was unusually good because he directed the criticisms to the members individually.
