SOME THINGS ABOUT WHICH GUILFORD STUDENTS NEED TO THINK

If everyone roes just as I do will this be an ideal world to live in? If every Guilford student makes as much noise as I do will Guilford dormitories be sufficiently quiet for good study? Can I visit every time I desire during study hour, knowing it is against the rules, and retain my self-respect? Can I afford to spend my study hours "loafing" when my people have made a great sacrifice to send me to college in order that I might prepare myself to meet the challenge of the times? And more still, can I afford to visit my neighbor and bother him from study when he has already caught the vision and realized the importance of working while it is day? Can I afford to do little—just little—things when no one is looking that of course I wouldn't do if people were around? Am I shining in my small corner in just the way that my Master intended I should? These are questions that every Guilford student needs to ask himself or herself. As college men or women are we need to realize the great responsibility that is resting upon us. We should feel that we are to be the leaders of the communities in which we reside and that now we are in training for this leadership. Our college life is so systematically arranged that we have time for the development of our physical, mental and spiritual lives. And if we do not make use of these opportunities as they confront us they are lost to us forever. If we do not study during study hours we are losing mental development of which we shall be sadly in need of some day. If we disobey study hour rules we consequently lose self-respect and honor without which no life is successful. If we are members of a college student body it is our business to keep ourselves straight and thereby help our neighbor rather than have the proctor or house-president send us home from an half-hour visit, or ask us to walk more noiselessly in the halls.

As Professor Balderston emphasized in chapel, we can not do as we please unless we please to do the things which do not harm our neighbors. It is absolutely essential to the success of our school life that we have some rules of behavior and that we obey these rules. There is no Guilford student who does not realize that this is true, yet sometimes students carelessly do things that cheat themselves, rob their neighbors and cause trouble for all concerned.

The college year is now past half gone and there is no Guilford student who does not need to speed all the study hour in preparing his or her lessons. Even if some students are able to pass their work and can spare a little time to slip in a neighbor's room and gossip for a while, maybe the neighbor is not brilliant enough to spare this time.

Let every Guilford student examine himself or herself and see where in he or she can make college life more ideal, more lovely, and more satisfactory to all concerned.

AIM AT SOMETHING.

The greatest incentive to work is purpose. Many of us do not realize on entering college what the aim should be in obtaining a higher education. We see that it means more study, but we do not realize the added responsibility that comes with greater opportunities and a broader outlook into the fields of thought. It is so easy to drift with the tide, with no special end in view, doing halfway only the tasks that are assigned us. The ones who have definite aims are the ones who will count for something, and it is here at school that we have a chance to decide our future work. Each of us has tendencies in some special direction and it is ours to develop these tendencies to the greatest possible degree, for some vital purpose.

During this new spring term let us examine anew our powers and set them in the right direction. Let us be cheerfully and hopefully unsatisfied; let us study more, learn more and determine more.

tention. She was conscious the last two days and knew that the end was near. She was anxious to recover because she knew her family needed her, but she remarked that she was not afraid to die. No one who knew her doubted the genuineness of her character nor her true Christian faith. Her younger sister, Edna, and Mrs. F. H. Nicholson were present at the time of her death.

She will be remembered affectionately by all Guilfordians who knew her. She went about doing good, and unquestionably gave her life for others. Of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.
