

Juniors Banquet Seniors

NEW GARDEN HALL SCENE OF ANOTHER PILGRIM LANDING

The annual banquet of the Junior class in honor of the graduating class was given last Wednesday evening under very pleasing circumstances. This event is always looked forward to by each succeeding class as they come to the last lap of the four-year (sometimes more), races for a diploma and the event this year more than filled expectations.

The guests on arriving at the entrance to New Garden hall were received by the Junior officers, who presented each guest in turn to each member of the Junior class. All were then seated in the foyer which was arranged informally so as to seat the company in groups. Here a very clever pantomime of Longfellow's "Elizabeth," was given which was much enjoyed by all. Madge Coble, as Elizabeth and Edward Hollady as John Estaugh, took the leading parts in this, with Marjorie Williams reading. Dovie Hayworth as Hannah and Herman Raiford as Joseph, helped to bring out the humor of the pantomime by the way in which they followed the leads.

After a few minutes of conversation that served to put everyone in right frame of mind for what was to follow the Seniors and faculty guests were escorted into the banquet hall by their hosts. The banquet room was tastefully decorated with the class colors of 1920. Over the cented of the table, which was arranged in form of a cross, hung a large bowl of sweet peas, the class flower of the Seniors. A massive grey rock with two tiny maids dressed in Pilgrim grey standing beside it was in the center of the table. This rock and maidens as well as the tiny facsimile which was placed on the cover of the programs represented the Plymouth rock, which first came to the notice of the world 400 years ago in old New England. The entire program of the evening was a reminder to the class of '20 that their graduation was privileged to be a commemoration of that event.

Numerical place cards marked with sweet peas showed each one his place at the festive board. A delicious five-course menu as given below was then served.

Algia Newlin, as toastmaster, with genuine Quaker wit, announced the toasts, which were responded to by the different members of the two classes and faculty. Edward Hol-
