EDITORIAL

When the men gave women the right of suffrage, our lawmakers considered this act an extension of the franchise. But now since this amendment is in force, some new born politicians seem to think that it is a shifting of the franchise from one class of people to another.

Is a gang of fellows showing the finest loyalty to their college and to their team when it is almost impossible to find a man who is willing to go for a bucket of water for the players during a game. A true patriot leaps forward at the chance to serve his team—he does not hang back and make excuses.

Last year it was "Bob Doak's team," or just the "team" that got the drubbings. This year "we" have tied Roanoke and handed a more bitter pill to Lynchburg. It will be a marvelously fine thing if this communistic athletic spirit is retained through out the season.

Saturday, October 7, seemed a busy day for Guilford. Between three o'clock in the afternoon and midnight, the students saw their eleven win a football game; heard a woman politician appeal to the voters of North Carolina; took part in a "gab fest" arranged by the associations' Social Committee; and then hilariously gave vent to their feelings in the warmth and light of a roaring bonfire.

The most careful observer cannot possibly select anyone of whom he can say, "This is a perfect man." Also we would seldom find, even in an extensive campaign, anyone, outside of a hospital for the insane, who would claim for himself such distinction. The ones however who believe themselves to be on the border of perfection are frequently people who are misled by mirages of the most extraordinary kind. If a perfect man could be found, he most assuredly would not be a one sided man.

Every student, of whatever political party, who participates in the present political campaign, for training in citizenship or for other reasons, should inspect his campaign policy, and assure himself that it is not so narrow that it will carry nothing that is not tailor made. No one ever became a debater who does not study both sides of a question. No foot ball team ever wins a victory by confining itself to developing its offensive. And no man ever becomes a statesman who is so narrow minded as not to consider the issues and the point of view of the opposing party. Such people, who are unable to look at more than one side of any political issue, who are too near sighted to see anything but the bad in the candidates of the opposing party, and nothing but good in their own candidates, are not the people who build good communities and strong popular governments.

Just as a player practices in his training for the game, so will he play in the game. Just as an orator trains, so will he speak when he faces his audience. And just as a man trains in citizenship, so will he serve his country in the future.

Incomplete registration figures from Columbia University indicate that their enrollment this year will exceed thirty-one thousand, a gain of over thirty-five percent over last year. Columbia then will be the largest educational institution in the world. Their enrollment at the past summer session was over ten thousand, the largest in the history of the university.

CAMPUS NOTES

Several old students were at the college for the Guilford-Lynchburg game. Among these were David J. White '20, Joseph G. Reddick, '18, Edgar McBane '14, Ira Hinshaw '18.

Miss Lucy Hinshaw of Yadkinville, was the guest of Minnie Casstephens for the week end.

Miss Estelle Neece, a former Guilford student, spent Sunday with friends at the college.

Among other week-end visitors on the campus were Miss Edith Harrison of High Point, and Miss Gertrude Fosure and Messrs. Gladstone and Max Idol of Jamestown.

The bon-fire Saturday night was the culminating expression of enthusiasm that prevailed on the campus all week. It only testified to the fact that true Guilford students are not satisfied until everything, even the expression of enthusiasm and of victory, is well done.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS' CLUB.

A club to study international relations, and international problems is being organized by the members of the Faculty and upper classmen. This club was organized just before commencement last year, but it was necessary to repeat the organization due to absence of some of the old members from school. The work of this club will be under the direction of Professor Mills.
