

ALUMNI NOTES

Olive Smith '14 is again teaching in the Raleigh High school.

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Downing are now living at No. 2 North Hampton St., Worcester, Mass. Mrs. Downing will be remembered as Mary Fox '14, and Mr. Downing as Professor of Chemistry at Guilford for a number of years. Mr. Downing is now research chemist for Graton & Knight Leather Co.

Fred M. Haley '14 is now Lieut. Henley, connected with the Chemical Laboratories, Edgewood Government Arsenal, Edgewood, Md.

F. R. Blaylock '16 is also connected with the Chemical Laboratory of the Edgewood Arsenal, Edgewood, Md.

The following announcement has just reached us: Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Kirkpatrick announce the marriage of their daughter Mazie Dell to Mr. C. Gordon Gainey ('04) on February eleventh, ninteteen hundred and twenty one, Greensboro, North Carolina. At home after February the eighteenth, Fayetteville, N. C., R. 7.

Miss Julia White, Librarian, has just received the following communication from David Couch '06:

"I have just sent to the Library today by prepaid express several years' proceedings of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, thinking that they might be of some value to the engineering students. "With kindest personal regards and best wishes for the colleg, etc."

This is the second contribution "D. H." has made to the college during this school year. We should be glad for other Alumni to manifest their interest by personal contributions,—Letters to the Alumni Department of the Guilfordian, volumes to the library, membership in the Athletic Association, personal visits to the college, etc.

Mary Doan '15 is receiving treatment in Rockefeller Institute, New York City. Address, Room 326, R. I. Hospital, 66th St. Avenue A.

MRS. WOODY LEADS Y. W. C. A.

Mrs. Waldo Woody gave a most interesting and helpful talk to the Young Women's Christian Association last Thursday evening, Feb. 10th. Mrs. Woody began by reading John 15:11. She then compared our lives with the vine. We should be living branches, not lifeless wood. No matter whether we choose to work at home or abroad, we are missionaries. Christ sends us and expects us to bear his points. There is no need of a new organization to save society today. All that is needed is for men and women, boys and girls all over the earth to quietly receive in the secrecy of their own hearts to join the discipling of Christ. To what are we consecrated? There is something better than yielding our lives to a fixed principle as a determined purpose. It is the yielding of our lives to a person, God and our Savior, Jesus Christ. John R. Mott said "Let us remember that it is consecration to God and not to a field, not to an occupation. We need not be concerned about the field or the occupation when God and his will are our supreme desire." Mrs. Woody then gave some of the needs of the foreign fields and most especially Cuba, the one in which she served as a missionary for several years. If a small candle is put in a dark land the light from it may be compared with Christianity among the heathen. There are so many and so few know about Christ. A great need of schools is felt in the foreign lands. In China only one person out of one thousand can read, in Japan only six out of one thousand, while in the United States eight hundred and ninety out of one thousand are able to read. She closed by repeating the twenty-third Psalm in Spanish.

MARVIN SHORE LEADS

Y. M. C. A.

The Y. M. C. A. was ably conducted last Thursday night by Marvin Shore, who made a very helpful talk on "Ideals." The speaker used as his text a passage in the Bible which reads as follows. "Daniel purposed in his heart not to defile himself but to seek for understanding and know the will of God." He pointed out, how in early life Daniel had learned to choose and reject discreetly, and how later he was able to come to a foremost place among the nation's men on account of his boyhood decisions.

"The greatest decision of any person is to decide for Christ, having as his purpose to live and work for Him." "Our real habits," the speaker pointed out, "are the ones which are formed in our early life and the young man or woman who sows wild oats is only fastening to himself or herself chains which will eventually bring one to degradation."

"Having once set our goal let us work toward that goal and permit nothing to come between us and our purpose except the things which will tend to make our lives better. Columbus, in spite of great opposition 'sailed on' and won. There were times when he no doubt was discouraged and at a loss how to proceed but he had fixed his purposed and had created his ideal although the attaining of that ideal cost him his life in the end. Sail upward, even as Columbus sailed onward, though through enjoyment and sorrow, and some time there will come the guiding light and we shall know the victory to be ours."

Daniel purposed in his heart not to defile himself. There are Daniels today and there are temptations as bad or even worse than those which he had to fight. Daniel won because he followed his convictions, first knowing that his convictions were right. The world is in need of men and women of Daniel's type.

DR. & MRS. BINFORD ENTERTAIN

ism. His poems are also noted for their daring imagery and the amazing sudden changes from the ridiculous to the sublime. Several musical selections were also given. Miss Wakemann, accompanied by Mrs. Binford gave two violin numbers. Mrs. Meredith and Miss Byrd each gave two vocal selections. These were greatly enjoyed and appreciated.

After the program the club enjoyed a social hour. Refreshments, consisting of cocoa, wafers and salted peanuts, were served during the evening by the hostess.

SENIORS LEAD CHAPEL.

The Senior class led the chapel February ninth. They presented the play, "History of Guilford College," which was written in 1915, by Miss Josephine L. Rhodes, Director of the Music Department at that time.

Miss Myrtle Cox read a synopsis of the first eight episodes, then the members of the class presented the last episode.

The play begins with the coming of the Friends to New Garden in 1750. It then takes up the history of the New Garden Boarding School, and finally, ends with the chartering of the college in 1888.

The members of the class acting special characters were Misses Myrtle Cox, Tom Stewart, and Grace Stone; Messrs. B. L. White, L. Tremain, and R. C. Bulla.

The class received many compliments for their adept leadership.
