EDITORIAL

If you desire the best Christmas possible, study hard this week and go home with a mind free from worry about class work and a suit-case free from text books.

Welcome Alumni

Nothing is more inspiring to students than the presence of Alumni representatives on the campus. We welcome them and feel that we are drawn closer to them each time they visit us. With a loyal alumni and an active body of trustees working together, a Greater Guilford is assured.

There is something for us to do. These organizations, however efficient they may be, cannot make the college its best unless we do our part. Let's boost our Guilford everywhere we go.

Progressive Guilford

Progressive and growing are two adjectives which may be applied to Guilford in many ways. Probably the two most recent developments are the completion of a new well, and the erection on the campus of a carefully planned and well equipped cottage now occupied by professor and Mrs. M. C. Davis.

This Progressive tendency has extended beyond the limits of the campus. Cannon's new modern brick store standing just outside the entrance gate is a splendid asset to the college.

Probably the next thing to be done is the grading of a new and larger athletic field for the girls. This will be of special value for the present grounds and equipment are entirely inadequate.

By way of suggestion we mention cement walks and a new gymnasium to be next in order, and some campus lights!

Christmas

It is only a week now until Christmas really begins. No matter who we are nor where we go, Christmas, that best day of all, is in our minds. However, when we stop to think, we often find ourselves questioning the real purpose and motive back of all our plans for rest and enjoyment.

This question, as all others, would be answered differently by different types of people. At first sight it is a time of vacation and home-coming, but deeper than this is the more powerful motive of giving, the basis for the real lasting Christmas spirit. This spirit, or its outward expression, has become so indelibly stamped in our nature that we are apt to accept it without question or feeling. Thanks to our religious nature and the splendid atmosphere of our college which leads to us here at Guilford the divine inspiration and Christian love.

If we are to get anything valuable from this Christmas season we must have something definite in mind and have associated with it the right mental and spiritual attitude. The presents which we give and receive, if they are to be of any benefit other than material, must be free from selfish motives, and given out of love rather than with the thought of exchange.

Regardless of religious creeds, the spirit in which the Christ child was given has become the ideal of the world, for it has been proved practical in the lives of individuals. The chaotic conditions which are prevalent throughout the world today extend a challenge for a broader application of these wonderful, yet simple teachings.

So while we are having such a joyful vacation, the challenge comes to us as college students and as influential men and women, to practice at this Christmas time the teachings of the One whose birth we are commemorating.

MAUDE SIMPSON RE-ELECTED PRESIDENT OF C. E. SOCIETY

During the past two Sunday evenings, open discussions have been held at the Christian Endeavor meetings. Many interesting topics have been brought up. The general interest in Christian Endeavor has been steadily increasing lately and everyone seems to be coming to this religious meeting.

Last Sunday night the election of officers took place and the following officers will be installed at the next regular meeting.

Maude Simpson was re-elected pres.; Harvey Dinkins, vice-pres.; Bessie Phipps, treasurer; Katie Lamberth, cor. sec.; Clara Coble, re-elected, recording secretar.

Beginning the first of the New Year, the Society membership will be divided into four groups and each group will have charge of at least two meetings.

High Point Day

forcements the Pointers took the laurels.

The day ended with speeches from C. M. Waynick, manager of the High Point Enterprise, Tom Sykes, Mr. Hardin, High Point Y. M. C. A. secretary, and Dr. Binford, president of Guilford, also the waving of Miss Louise's stick.

Women's Athletics

From all reports a very enthusiastic basket ball season is expected among the girls this year. Miss Parker says that 50 or 60 girls have gone out for this sport. They meet for practice in the Gymnasium on Tuesday and Thursday.

Ruth Stephens spent the weekend at her home in Greensboro.

Y. W. C. A. RAISES NICE SUM AT CHRISTMAS BAZAAR

The young women's christian association held it's annual Christmas Bazaar at Memorial Hall Saturday evening. The bazaar was a success in every way.

Under the direction of Miss Virginia Osborne, president of the association, and Miss Marie Beamon, vice-president, several interesting and profitable projects were carried out. Possibly the most exciting one was the guessing contest. The object of which was to guess the number of beans in a glass jar. Mr. Edward Holder was declared the winner and received as a prize, one of Mary Robert's latest novels. The display of gifts was especially good and they were quickly sold. The proceeds which amounted to $35.00 go to the general reasury of the organization.

OBLIGATION OF COLLEGE MEN AND WOMEN IN Y. W. C. A.

Edith Macon, as leader of the Y. W. C. A., Thursday evening, spoke upon the obligations of college men and women toward the industrial workers of the nation.

In the first place the speaker asked the question "Who pays for one's college education?" She then proceeded to explain how the state makes appropriations to the state colleges. These appropriations come from state taxes and all the people are taxed, thus one is under obligations to all classes of people for the existence of state colleges in particular. There is then a relationship between college students and industrial workers, but most students are prone to forget that all these people aid in maintaining the school, and tht those who come to college have no more right to college endowments than those who are not in a position to accept them.

Miss Macon in concluding her remarks, stressed the duty of college men and women to live their lives as much as possible for the benefit and advancement of the less fortunate members of society.

Home Economics

Miss Kopf, head of the Home Economics Dep., took her classes in Art Appreciation and Household Management to Greensboro last week to see "Castle Charming" the new perfectly planned model home that was thrown open to the public last week, for home lovers and those interested in house planning. The classes were enthusiastic over the house as a whole, and came away very pleased.

Virginia Osborne is now doing her practice teaching for her Home Economics major.

Endowment Campaign

be probably the most difficult to secure but by the help of the graduates and former students, Dr. Perisho says this can be quickly accomplished.

According to him, the present stage of the campaign justifies the statement that its success is insured, which of itself guarantees the continuation of Guilford as an "A" class college indefinitely.
