"LISTEN, LADIES" STAGED BY HIGH SCHOOL FACULTY

"Listen, Ladies" was the title of what might have been better named "Listen, Gentlemen," the play given in Memorial Hall, Friday evening by the Guilford High School faculty. The gentlemen of the town of Guilford were made to sit up and pay attention literally and actually.

In what was a clever farce to start with the ladies of the school made an appeal for funds for Guilford's new school building, by localizing the action of the play and centering the nice gossip around Guilford's more notorious characters. The play concerned a search for the hidden treasures of a German soldier who once camped near Guilford Battleground. Of course the sarcastic gentlemen of the town dared the members of the sewing circle to find it, and even hid another five thousand in bona fide checks to reward their efforts; and of course the dear ladies found both the treasure and the reward to the mutual benefit of everybody and the delight and satisfaction of the audience. Comedy found its way through the choice gossip and the unique setting coupled with the characterization by Mrs. Sarah Sampson and Miss Gilbert of the rebellious maid and the good old housewife who took her chickens and Molly Moo to camp.

Proceeds of the play are to go to the Parent-Teacher Association.

Virginia Gallaway spent the week-end at her home in Greensboro.

Neola Steed spent Sunday at her home in High Point.

DR. BINFORD RETURNS FROM EDUCATIONAL BOARD MEETING WITH PRAISE FOR ANTIOCH

French Committe Session Is Held In Richmond, Indiana

President Binford has just returned from Richmond, Indiana, where he attended the annual meeting of the Educational Board of the Five years Meeting.

At these annual meetings questions of mutual interest to the colleges are considered—such matters as financial campaigns, scholastic standards, co-operation with inter-church educational organizations.

The main feature of Dr. Binford's trip was a visit to Antioch College, with which he was favorably impressed. Antioch College says Dr. Binford is conducting one of the most interesting experiments in higher education in America. "The students there alternate between five weeks of academic study and five weeks' work in various industries in the adjoining cities. Every student is paired with another student so that while one group is studying another is out working. This has been adopted, not so much as a means of giving students an opportunity to earn a goodly portion of their expenses while in college, but rather as a program of education. The administration believes that work under college guidance is a very important part of a liberal education. Such participations in the various professions and in industry increases one's interest and enthusiasm in his college studies and at the same time keeps the student in touch with the industrial world and helps to bridge over the break between college training and life work. This experiment of Antioch is attracting wide attention and is meeting with a great response by young people seeking a preparation for life. The enrollment there has increased some 300 per cent, since the plan was inaugurated two and a half years ago. The students while they are out on their industrial period are scattered throughout Ohio and adjoining states. The college is making an effort, however, to provide industrial opportunities on the campus for the Freshmen."

COLLEGE ORCHESTRA AGAIN BEGINS ITS FUNCTION

With the wave of the baton Saturday night the college orchestra again became a functioning organization. The loss of the entire string section, with the exception of the second violin, last year prevented organization at the beginning of the fall term. But with the addition of new pieces, a better orchestra is expected for the spring than has yet been organized.

A cello has been added to the strings under the hand of James Barbee. Ashby Pamplin of Greensboro will head the violin section. E. B. Parks will add to the brass with a C-melody saxophone, and Ralph Farlow has kindly consented to return to his former position at first trumpet, as occasion demands.

Alven Stone spent the week-end in Greensboro.
