EDITORIAL

With examinations in the offing we are not surprised at the serious-like looks that begin to dot the campus.

We would like to get a report of the Guilford New Years resolutions that are still intact.

The basket ball games are ahead, please do not forget to keep your throat in good condition.

Guilford's endowment campaign is nearing the close. Why not start a little drive among the students?

When the last dollar has been raised on the endowment campaign, what do you say to a big celebration among ourselves, the Guilford students, something like a bonfire? It will be better than beating Elon.

Guilford has better prospects for a successful basket ball season than in many moons. Stay behind it until holes come in your throats.

There is a rumor afloat that Guilford is to debate Elon and Lenoir in a triangle affair. This reminds us that the more persons trying out for places on that squad, the better showing the Quakers will have of coming out in first place.

J. W. Bailey's speech at Memorial Hall, we hope, is the first of a series of lectures dealing with the election to be held next fall. Guilford students have a right to be informed upon political subjects.

How many of you students are good salesmen? It doesn't make any difference what you do in later life, if you amount to anything, you are going to have some project to sell. Right now we know of no better means of getting some practice them to sell Guilford College. We know that we have the best college in the state, for its purpose, now let's get other people to realize that same fact.

The writer of this article was in conversation with a leading citizen of a neighboring town, an alumnus of Guilford, also of Haverford, who has served in the legislature and has had the opportunity to examine institutions of a larger type.

He says that Guilford is unique, as far as he knows, in colleges of this section in the brand of men she turns out. He further declared that he knew of no other place where a young man was turned out with the same excellent type of character and so broad minded an outlook on life.

Sell Guilford, your college.

The glee club, ladies and gentlemen, is fast becoming a strong part of Guilford college. We know of no other thing that will advertise the best that Guilford has, in a more efficient way, than this selected bunch of young men.

A member of the Carolina Glee club, a South-wide known affair, said that Guilford was putting on as good a program as the university club. This man had seen the plans for the Quaker presentation. We think that he speaks, not as the scribes and Pharisees, but from good authority.

The Elon Battle

Pocketing the sphere with clock work precision in the first half J. G. Frazier of the Quakers led his team off to a flying lead and to victory over the Christians, the final score being 30 to 24 in favor of Guilford.

J. G. Frazier was the outstanding star of the game, caging seven field and two foul goals during the first period for 16 of his team's 30 points.

The first half ended 25 to 11 with Guilford holding the big end of the scoring. Elon rallied in the second half and played the visitors to a standstill allowing them only five points during the half while the home team annexed 13. However, the early lead of the visitors could not be overcome in spite of the desperate rally staged by the Elon quint. J. W. Frazier was an able second to J. G. Frazier.

Voliva won the honors for the Christians with six field goals, with R. Brown doing second best work.

WHAT ABOUT FRIDAY NIGHTS AND SOCIETY

Literary society work of Guilford College is lagging in interest. This state or condition is a source of much regret to society workers. It should be a source of regret for students, faculty and alumni alike. If any one type of organization plays an important part in college life, the literary societies do. The training received in the literary societies is a moulding influence in the lives of those who take advantage of it.

Students who take an active part in society work are the ones who make a mark in the world after leaving college. An organization that is so vital in student life both in college and after years deserves the greatest cooperation possible.

Some years ago, a ruling was passed by the faculty that nothing should be staged on Friday night that would interfere with society work. It is in view of the fact that this ruling is being violated that the writer expresses himself.

It seems that basket-ball games on Friday nights are getting to be the rule. Both high school and college games being scheduled at that time. This always takes a part of the members from the regular meetings.

Athletic events and performances by other organizations on Friday night cause a lag in society work due to conflict. Society work must not cease. Guilford needs it and the students need it. Shall it continue at Guilford or shall it go under?

J. W. Bailey Makes Talk

way control and from there to Wilmington under the Coast Line control. He told how the Coast Line and Southern Railway officials had bought this line by "blocking the market," to operate it as a local railroad in an endeavor to sever an east to west trunk-line. A political pull has kept this road as it is, and has prevented the operation of a continuous thoroughfare which, in the speaker's opinion, would solve the freight rate muddle in the state. "Why has this outrage not been righted," he asked.

In conclusion, Mr. Bailey urged the young men and women to take a more active interest in politics—not toward office seeking but toward interpreting it in terms of right and wrong.

Norman and Marshburn Head

Two Women Basketball Teams Basketball is the popular sport among the girls this season. Sixty girls have registered for the game. The physical director has divided this number into eight teams with regular practice each week for every squad.

An interesting feature of the basketball season is the annual game between the old and new students. Carrie Norman, the newly elected captain of the old girls, is getting her team into fine shape; while Lena Marsh Owen, who holds the title for the new girls, has her players almost ready for the clash. The tilt will be staged some time in the near future.
