EDITORIAL

It is now time to begin putting off work to be done during the Christmas holidays.

Incidentally, starting with the 22nd and ending with the 5th, we will have 14 holly-days.

The Winston-Salem Journal stated that "Shirt" Smith was as good at "hitting the basket" as he was at "missing the bat."

It has been noted that President Coolidge didn't mention Red Grange in his address to Congress! Well, he has never been very coolidgeate anyway.

According to Jo Jo's accounts, Old Boreas, Sprightly Jack, and Jupiter Pluius set December 1 as the time to start work they commenced according to schedule.

It is alleged that a member of the faculty went into a senior boy's room a few days ago and found the occupant studying. He immediately assumed a sympathetic tone and asked him, "What's the matter?"

Lenoir and Wake Forest are having a few words about who beat Guilford the worse in football. Football season is over; a more timely topic is: what will be the outcome of the basketball situation. There's room for discussion there!

"Iron Man Seabock," who drove a Ford car continuously for over 110 hours could not qualify for a role in "Adam and Eva." It is reported that he was exhausted with this little drive which took no brain work; the characters in "Adam and Eva" practice strenuously for nearly that long, doing intense concentrated labor!

Mrs. Rusack, to Jo Paul: Miss Paul, you mustn't laugh out loud in the classroom.

Jo Paul: I didn't mean to do it. I was smiling and the smile busted.

Elsie: "Del, what's the shape of a kiss?"

Del: "Give me one and we'll call it square."

"Niggah, I se suah sorry fo' you," said a negro pugilist to his opponent as they squared off. "I was born with boxing gloves on."

"Mebbe you wuz," retorted his challenger, "and ah reckon youse gwine to die de same way."

ON HOUSE-CLEANING

The stack-room of the library seems to have been hit by the little end of a tornado, which has worked havoc with orderly steel shelves and composed dusty volumes. At least that is the impression that a desperate reporter gets when he wanders in search of news. Apparently the tornado has just finished its work and left the scene so that one is likely to find stray mice, musty magazine files, radiator plugs and every thing that a complete revolution is likely to turn up, in shapely confusion and ready to be described by an agile pen.

However no such catastrophe has descended upon the College's collection of preserved knowledge. A close inspection and a little more thought would suffice to establish the fact that no well-meaning cyclone would hurl down the stacks of biblical and religious essays and leave their next-shelf neighbors intact with dust undisturbed. Nor would it return in another playful mood and dash these same books back into place nice and clean and with the same gust dislodge the whole collection of books of the next kindred subject just alongside. It is simply the height of pre-winter house-cleaning. Hence the apparent upheaval!

WEBSTERIANS INSTALL NEW ADMINISTRATION

The principal event at the meeting of the Websterian Literary Society Friday night was the installation of a new regime of officers. Elton Warrick was installed to head the organization during the next term. His associate officers are Walter Robertson, Vice-President, Elwood Parker, Secretary, Raymond Ebert, Assistant Secretary, and Paul Ireland, Marshal.

The literary program was mainly of an extemporaneous nature. The meeting was entertained by two impromptu debates of an humorous order. Walter Robertson gave a well prepared reading on the "Lincoln's Life as President." The last number offered was a reading by Ray Parrish.

ZATASIANS ENTERTAINED BY AN ORIGINAL STUNT

A strikingly original program was given in the meeting of the Zatasian Literary Society, Friday evening. Zelma Hollady read several short, humorous selections of modern verse. This number was followed by a "Melodrama" read by Alice Hazard and acted out by a number of the members of the Society. It proved to be a very clever stunt and was well received by the whole society.

The following new officers were elected, Ola Nicholson, president; Edith Hedgecock, secretary, and Sarah Jannette, Marshall.

FORTY FIRST ANNUAL WEBSTERIAN CONTEST

(Continued from page 1.) away from the amateurs. He also advocated immediate restriction of immigration. Lastly he advised making the police force of a semi-military order. With these improvements, he argued, better conditions would soon obtain.

Paul Swanson, who discussed "Permanent Peace through Moral Education," held that with the right kind of home training the nations of the world could be so educated in one generation as to make war a ridiculous impossibility. Loyless Melvin, whose topic was "Obedience," gave a brief discussion of the conquest of self and suggested methods of overcoming the tendency toward pursuit of happiness without regard for the welfare of others and the human meakness of considering the will of self the only law.

The judges of the contest were Pro. Hershall Macon, of the Richard J. Reynolds High School in Winston-Salem, Mr. Robert Frazier of Greensboro, and Dr. Elwood C. Perisho, of Guilford College.

Former Student

Dr. John K. Pepper of 305-7 O'Hannon Bldg., Winston-Salem, N. C., responded as follows to a letter sent recently to graduates and former students by the President of the Alumni Association and the Editor of the Guilfordian:

"Responding to your recent appeal and request I am sending, attached, a check for $2.00.

"While I did not graduate from Guilford, and shall always regret it, I have watched with a great deal of interest and pleasure through the past three decades her development into her at present, may I say, rather enviable status in the concert of colleges and am happy to claim her as my Alma Mater and to fraternize with her student body.

PHILOMATHEANS SPEND AN EVENING AS THE GUESTS OF HENRY CLAY SOCIETY

Read Barbee, Byron Haworth and Paul Holt sang three well chosen selections. The first number was "A Winter song;" the second was "Now is the month of maying," by Morley; the third was an original shant; "Philomathean Girls." The quartette closed the formal program.

Following President Barbee's speech of welcome to the Philomathean Maude Simpson, Philomathean President, and Alice Thompson, Chandos Kimrey, Virginia Pamperin, and Lydia White made speeches of response. The meeting adjourned to an hour of social enjoyment at which refreshments were served.

Besides the Philomathean guests, there were present of the faculty Miss Louise Osborne, Prof. and Mrs. Samuel Haworth, Prof. and Mrs. Milton C. Davis, Prof. H. O. Smith, Miss Minnie Kopf Prof. A. I. Newlin and Miss Era Lasley.
