of which would not affect other existing Jewish states.

The speaker gave a brief history of Jerusalem and Palestine, the former home of the Jews. About 125-35 A. D. the uprising of the Jews was most terribly crushed. All the inhabitants of Jerusalem were annihilated and the city renamed. Until fairly recent times the Jews have not been treated with due respect in Jerusalem. The modern movement back to the city began about 1880. "However," continued Dr. Grant, "the ambition to plant a Jewish colony or plan a home for the Jews was brought about by the mob treatment of the Jews in Russia and other countries."

Following his summary of the early Jewish history, Dr. Grant entered into the position and relationship of the Jews with the Arabic peoples.

Although the total Jewish population is rather small, compared with other nations, they have appeared in most peace conferences held in various countries of the world. About fourteen percent of the population of Poland is Jewish. The percentage of Jews in Palestine, with a population of about 750,000, is less than in Poland. The majority population of Palestine is Arabic.

At this point the speaker stressed the fact that no nationality should be an association of powers even though that nationality be a minority.

Palestine was the one place which the Jews wanted as their home. Sometimes during a close place in the World War, England, who had control of Palestine, had the chance to make a grant of privileges to the Jews in order to gain some money. This privilege was made and Sir Herbert Samuel, formerly an Englishman who later became a Jew, was made High Mandate of Palestine.

After the war there were about 100,000 Jews in Palestine—"Jews of all kinds; farmers, poets, scholars, and scientists who are looking forward to a kind of paradise in Palestine." They have already established a Jewish University on the Mount of Olives.

On the other side are the national people who cannot stand the fact that the ten percent minority people are being called in and trained to take charge.

"The Biblical argument," said Dr. Grant, "is quite different. It is always dangerous for politics to assist religion."

Although Palestine is thriving there seems to be a few radical Jews who are arousing the suspicion of the Arabs. There are also radical Arabs who are arousing the suspicion of "This problem," concluded Dr. the Jews.

Grant, "Must be handled with the greatest of skill, because there is a load of dynamite in Palestine. We must approach this people with the hope of learning something."

SPEAKS IN CHAPEL
"What are we thinking of preparing for?" asked Dr. Grant, Thursday morning in beginning his last chapel talk. He went on to say that it is possible to become so keen in eye-sight that one may see all the bad things in life and more too. On the other hand one may see some good. "People are often cut in half in trying to see things as they ought to be. Shakespeare saw people as they were."

The remainder of his time Dr. Grant spent talking about a character who was "just himself", namely President Coolidge.

For nine years Dr. Grant lived just across the street from the Coolidge family in North Hampton, Mass., Hence Dr. Grant is a personal friend of President Coolidge.

"Coolidge is unsusceptible of inflation," began Dr. Grant, "He has held nineteen elective offices of the twenty for which he has been a candidate."

The speaker went on to say that Coolidge has always had a strong liking for hard work. His motto is to do the job just as well as he possibly can. With this reputation together with his sincerity in elections he seemed to get a great number of votes from the opposing party.

"He is a man of ideals," concluded Dr. Grant, "which he believes can be brought into actual facts in the near future."
