OXFORD IS FAMOUS FOR ITS PHILOSOPHY

New Course, the "Modern Greats," Is Given for Students Not Wishing to Specialize in Classics

F. AYDELOTTE GIVES OPINION

(Summary of an article on "Philosophy at Oxford," by Pres. Frank Aydelotte, of Swarthmore College, Swarthmore, Pa., who is the American Secretary for the Rhodes Scholarship.)

In many fields of academic study there is some one institution which stands out above all the rest. If the question were raised as to what is the best place for philosophy, the answer, I think, would be, Oxford.

There are several reasons for this answer. For one thing, philosophy holds the central place in the course which, by general consent, shows the Oxford tradition at its best, the course in Literae Humaniores or "greats." This is really an intensive study of Greek and Latin civilization. The student reads the "Republic" through in Greek, and tops it off with Aristotles' "Ethics;" then with the intellectual muscle produced by this somewhat heavy gymnastic, he goes on to a rapid tour of moral philosophy and a strong-winded plunge into logic. This is the kind of work which in Oxford leads to a B. A. Most Americans and many Englishmen have felt a little reluctant to spend so much time on the ancients, and in answer to the increasing demand, Oxford has established a "modern greats" which attempts for the modern period what the traditional course does for the ancient. This new course covers history, economics, and politics besides philosophy, but it is philosophy still that carries the greatest prestige; and at any rate, since these subjects are all philosophically studied, it is the men who are most at home in reflective analysis that finally lead the lists.

Apart from the central place of philosophy in the tradition of Oxford, there are three other factors that make it philosophically pre-eminent. One is the method of teaching. You are given a tutor or supervisor for whom you write frequent papers, and you must discuss and defend these productions in the privacy of his room. Directly confronted with a practiced mind, you soon find your hidden failings of manner and matter coming painfully but most instructively to light.

Again, at Oxford philosophy is discussed. The place in term-time seethes with talk, some bad, but much of it is good; and the power to thrust and parry is highly prized. The average English student with less knowledge, perhaps, than ourselves, strikes one as having his wits incomparable better in hand, and he maintains his views with more readiness, adroitness, and resource. And the meetings, formal and informal, philosophical, political, and literary, at which the intellectual game is played, are without number.

Finally, there are as many teachers of philosophy at Oxford as at three or four of our larger universities put together. Each of the 21 colleges has its own philosophical tutor, and besides these there are the university professors, the dons at the women's colleges, the teachers at Manchester and Mansfield, the unofficial private coaches.

Perhaps a word about the conditions of this famous scholarship will not be amiss. To compete for it, a man must have reached 19 and not passed 25, and he must be at least a sophomore in his college. He may compete either in the state in which he lives or the state in which he has received his college training. Appointments are made on the basis of the man's record and of a fairly extended personal interview by a state committee. Applications are due in October; the appointments are announced in December.

JAMESTOWN CLUB ENTERTAINS

April 14.—The Senior class of Jamestown High School was entertained by the Jamestown Club of Guilford College here Saturday evening.

The high school seniors, together with members of the high school faculty, began to arrive on the campus about 5 o'clock and were greeted by various members of the club.

Both the visitors and members of the club had dinner at Founders Hall, after which the Jamestonians were shown over the college campus, stopping at the library, the museum in the biology laboratory, and at the home of Dr. Perisho, then visiting the boys' new club room in Archdale Hall. Dean Trueblood was present in the club room and gave the high school students a practical talk on "Why One Should Come to College."

Going from the club room the whole party attended the Minnesingers Glee Club concert at Memorial Hall.

This entertainment of the Jamestown seniors by alumni of the high school has become an annual event and serves not only as a binding link between former students and present day students, but as a real good time for both and an advertisement for the college as well.

The visiting Jamestonians were: Prof. and Mrs. W. A. White and small son, Billy, Lucy Gardner, Reucha Chadwick, Frances Hassell, Grace Hassell, Reva Mitchell, Alethia Manning, Gretchen Davis, Edward Davis, William Ragsdale, and Jack Armfield.

Members of the Jamestown Club are: Ethel Chadwick, Ruth Bundy, Mildred Kimrey, Virginia Ragsdale, Mary Reynolds, Ruth Horney, Annie Wagner, Evelyn Hayworth, Alma Hassell, Paul Reynolds, Vaughn Wyrick, and James Harper.

A returned vacationist tells us that he was fishing in a pond one day when a country boy who had been watching him from a distance approached him and said, "How many fish yer got, mister?"

"None yet," he was told. "Well, yer ain't doin' so bad," said the youngster. "I know a feller what fished here for two weeks an' he did not get any more than you got in half an hour."—Boston Transcript.

He (observing loving couples on porch): That's all right; there seems to be plenty of spare neck about.

REINHOLT AT GUILFORD

During the illness of Dr. Perisho, the Geology classes have been under the instruction of Oscar H. Reinholt.

Mr. Reinholt, who in 1903-4, served as superintendent of the Army Coal Mine in the Philippines, has for many years been concerned with the study of fuel and power. His 27-page article in The Engineering Magazine for January, 1906 on "U. S. Enterprise in the Coal Trade of the Philippines" was abstracted under "Leading Articles of the Month" in Review of Reviews, February, 1906.

He was recently quoted by Dr. Henry Goddard Leach in a radio debate on "Super-Power" concurrently with the appearance of two opposing articles in the March Forum on the same subject.

Responding to the editor's request, Mr. Reinholt declared that, in his opinion, super-power should remain under government control and ownership, its development should be done under contract with established engineering concerns, but its distribution should be left to responsible public service corporations.
