SEVEN PROJECTS LISTED

Progression Vs. Depression Is The Struggle We Face

In 1926, Guilford College completed a very successful financial movement which brought its endowment up to standard requirements, gave the institution membership in the regional standardizing organization, and recognition as an approved college by the American Medical Association.

In 1927, the Board of Trustees appointed the Centennial committee, composed of members of the Board, members of the faculty, and members of the Alumni Association. This committee undertook to work out a program for the ten years leading up to our centennial celebration. It has projected a program along seven lines.

First, it proposed the formation of the Centennial Club which was to be composed of a group of people who would subscribe to a sustaining fund to keep up the standards of the college during the period leading up to the centennial year.

Second, the endowment was to be increased so as to relieve the club of its annual contributions at the end of the centennial year.

Third, a building program which would add to our classroom and laboratory facilities, and provide a building for our physical education program was included.

Fourth, our equipment for instruction, particularly the library was to be enlarged.

Fifth, the reorganization of our curriculum so as to meet modern needs and modern problems was made an important item in the program.

Sixth, in order to carry out these plans the faculty and the Alumni were to be organized for more efficient work.

Examination Week Routs Campus Pep

Day Of Reckoning Is At Hand
And Frantic Cramming
Is Popular Sport

"What's the difference between an apostle and a disciple?" "Name the Vitamins. How were they discovered?" "When was the first high school in North Carolina opened?" "How do you find the cube root of a number?" "What was Plato's solution of the Ultimate Reality?" "Give a character sketch of Falstaff." "I just know I can't do practice teaching." "Honest to goodness, if I don't pass that French Comprehensive, I'm not coming back next semester." "I've studied three solid hours on Education."

These and many similar topics are discussed at the dining-room table, in the halls, bath tubs, post office, on the walks, everywhere. Why, the stranger within our midst could get a liberal education free of charge—provided he had the mental capacity to embrace the many and varied educational remarks that are being made. Why the sudden interest, the earnest seeking after knowledge, and the weary hours of cramming?

It's examination week!

LOYAL WORKER

Miss Maud L. Gainey, college Treasurer, has completed her thirtieth year of service for Guilford.

First '32 Guilfordian Honors Miss Gainey

Thirtieth Year Of Unstinted
Service Is Past For Treasurer

A FRIEND TO STUDENTS

The words in the dedication of the 1928 Quaker are "Quiet yet most effective have been her services to the college since 1901, especially as Treasurer. It is through her patience, exactness, and consistent effort that she has won a place in the hearts of all who know her. And it is for the gift of her own self as a contribution toward benefiting our many needs that we wish to dedicate this

The 1928 Quaker

These words are only a single expression of a deep feeling which exists for one whose thirtieth year of service to Guilford College was marked by the passing of the year, nineteen hundred and thirty-one. She came here as secretary to President Hobbs and was later assistant to Mr. George White, Treasurer. At the death of Mr. White, in 1917, Miss Gainey accepted his post and has filled it flawlessly since that time. Miss Gainey was reared on a large estate near Fayetteville and attended North Carolina College before coming to Guilford.

Few students have ever left Guilford who have not felt some evidence of her affection, and few are those whom she could not number among

MAKE THE CAKE OF 1937

Quite a number of graduates and former students have been joining the Guilford College Centennial Club recently. We want the One Hundredth Birthday Cake to be big and sweet in 1937. Saying it with DOLLARS monthly, quarterly, half yearly, or yearly will help a lot.

This is the second installment of the financial backers of the Guilford College Centennial club.

Nationally Known Leader In Congregational Church
And Mission Work

SUBJECT HARTFORD PLAN

Dr. R. H. Potter, Dean of Hartford Theological Seminary, was the Chapel speaker on Wednesday morning, January 14. Dr. Potter is a nationally known leader in the church of today, particularly in the Congregational Church, and is well known in mission work.

Dr. Potter brought greeting from the Hartford Seminary to the faculty and students of Guilford. He spoke on the plans of Hartford.

"Hartford Seminary Foundation is an institution or a group of institutions for training in Christian service," said Dr. Potter. Especially for the training of young men and women for ministers and missionaries, the usual line of theological work is followed. The school of Religion has a student body of 125. The school of Mission is to prepare more adequately for missions.

The challenge of today and how Hartford endeavors to meet this challenge was the main content of the talk. The seminary is concerned with the development of the Christian religion and of character that can stand the stress and strain of modern life. Christian religion is a gift from God to men, which enables them to become sons of God. The function of an institution of religion is to live the life of Christ so men will find in Christ a new way of life. It is through the way of Jesus that power is given to achieve life and to glimpse the ideal. Men at Hartford study as they would in a laboratory. They glimpse the ideal, take the example of the Master, and build it into life, and in this way minister to the enemy of Jesus.

The heart of Christian religion is the heart of experience. Along with creeds and orders of worship, they continuously take the Gospel of Jesus and apply it to relationship of living. Through experience comes the power to minister to the vision of

"The Betrothal" Is Most Artistic

Spring Play To Be Finest
Production Given
In Years

13 SENIORS ARE IN CAST

The work of the Dramatic Council on "The Betrothal," spring play to be presented on February 20, is indicative that the production will be the finest bit of art achieved in several years. The Senior class has expressed a desire to reproduce the play at commencement, and both the class and Council are working to make the spring production an effective one.

The cast of twenty-seven characters has been chosen, thirteen of which are members of the Senior class, and practicing has begun.

Due to the fact that "The Betrothal" is a departure from the usual type of production, much interest was shown in the try-outs, making the competition much keener than ever before. For the same reason the Council is showing unusual interest in staging the play. Original scenery has been designed and is under construction, one scene is being painted by a professional Theatrical Artist. Lighting effects will surpass anything seen before on the Guilford stage, due to the purchase of much new equipment and the planning of novel effects.

J. G. Clayton, Rural Hall Business Man, Is Dead

The whole student body extends to Virginia Clayton their sincerest sympathy in her recent grief, the death of her father.

J. G. Clayton, prominent Rural Hall business man, was drowned near Galax, Va., December 31, 1931, when the truck in which he was riding left the highway near Madow Creek and plunged into Gordon's Mill pond. A youthful couple, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Moore, who were accompanying him, were drowned also.

Just what caused the accident will probably never be known. The heavy truck left the highway at a curve and plunged into the mill pond, falling in such a way that one headlight was left burning.

Mr. Clayton was well known throughout Winston-Salem and the major portion of Forsyth County. He was a member of the school board of Rural Hall High School for many years, and he was also a member of the Friends Church at Guilford College.

Surviving him are his wife, two daughters, Virginia, and Marybelle Clayton, and one son, J. G. Clayton, Jr.

Bennett Quartette Entertains Joint 'Y'

The Bennett College Quartette, with their director and accompanist delightfully entertained the Y. M. and Y. W. group at a joint meeting on Thursday evening, January 7.

The Quartette sang three groups of songs. The first group consisted of three numbers: "There's A Meeting Here Tonight," "Jack O' Diamonds," and "Lindy Lou." "Lindy Lou" was perhaps the most enthusiastically received. The second group consisted of two songs: "Going Home," and "I Didn't Feel No Ways Tired." A third number by the Quartette was the negro spiritual "Go Down Moses."

Misses Jesse Lee Johnson, Elfreda Sandifer, and Maide Ruth Gamble each sang a solo. Miss Gamble proved to be very accomplished. She was not only a singer but a talented reader. She gave two readings which received great applause. Then, by request, she gave the reading which was such a "hit" last year when the Bennett Quartette gave a program at a similar meeting. The reading, "I See Glad I See Here To-Night" was so clever and amusing that the audience wanted to re-echo "I See Glad I See Here To-Night."
