Straw Vote Gives Conrad, Dornseif Lead for May Queen

Ripperger, Anderson, New Choir Talent, Featured in Concert, March 28

8 Veteran Members Sing Solos in Final Concert Before Tour

With the Euterpe club of Greensboro as its honored guests, the Guilford A Capella choir, ready to begin its spring tour, will present the traditional home concert on March 28 at 8 p. m. in Memorial hall.

Newly-discovered freshman vocalists Joan Ripperger and Barbara Anderson share the mezzo-soprano solo in A Pastoral Chorologue, a number based on the Twenty-third Psalm. Marion Huff accompanies with a reading, which distinguishes this number from others the choir sings. Joe Parker, choir president, contributes a bass solo.

For three years a featured soprano soloist with the group, Eileen Dornseif will take the solos in Easter Bells and Lullaby on Christmas Eve. She also will join tenor Alton Blair in a duet of Benedictus.

Soprano solos will feature Clela Stevens in a Christmas carol, Legend of the Bells; and Barbara Clark, sophomore, in Ave Maria, O Come, O Come Emmanuel, and the beloved spiritual, Swing Low, Sweet Chariot.

Phyllis Barker, alto, will lead the choir in the numbers Let the Words of

Trips to Contact Alumni Planned by Milner, Parsons

Dr. Clyde A. Milner and Mr. David Parsons are continuing a series of trips over the state to contact Guilford alumni groups. Plans have been made for a meeting at Winston-Salem on March 27.

The Atlanta alumni will meet in connection with the choir when they stop there March 30, during the annual spring tour.

Wayne county alumni met at Goldsboro Thursday, March 13. A meeting

Lie-Detector Demonstrated; Boston Palder, Guinea Pig

By CORKY FIELD

Springing like a March hare from his post on the front row of Mem hall auditorium, "Boston" Palder scooted to the platform to prove to all us doubting Guilfordians (and perhaps to himself) that his stories about Boston were the Gospel Truth. The truth? Yes, by that famed machine, the lie-detector.

As he fidgeted before the crucial moment, the test of his veracity, the apparatus used to record his blood pressure and respiration brought violent motion to the indicator on the machine. Once the norm plus excitement level had been reached, Boston answered "No" to the question, "Are your intentions at Womans college platonic?" and the instrument rather mercilessly disagreed. When asked whether everybody in Boston wore green on St. Patrick's day, Larry answered "Yes," and the needle recorded somewhat arrogant, patriotic loyalty. Whether or not the experience of the lie-

Class Schedule, March 29

Classes of Saturday morning, March 29, will be shortened to aid students in making train and bus connections for trips homeward.

The schedule is as follows:

First period—8:00-8:30.

Second period—8:35-9:05.

Third period—9:10-9:40.

Fourth period—9:45-10:15.

A train north will leave Greensboro at 11:25 a.m.

Guilford Will Launch Student Relief Drive

A World Student Service Fund campaign will be launched at Guilford on April 7. Having begun with a group of 15, there are now nearly 30 people working on the drive.

In this work, Guilford is cooperating with colleges and universities all over America in helping to raise money for student relief. W. C. has recently finished a drive in which $1,100 was raised by the students alone.

Committee chairmen at Guilford are: student solicitation, John Downing; faculty solicitation, Mrs. Francis Hayes; education, Malcolm Crooks; finances, Margaret Townsend; publicity, Bob Rohr.

The purpose of the fund is to help train future leaders in China and in Europe, by allowing them to continue their education to help create good will among students of the world; and to lay the foundations for the post-war cooperation between the nations of the world.

Books are so scarce in war areas, that often one book must be used by as many as 200 students. Medical care is a luxury, and many books are used directly for this purpose. Students are trying to continue without food, buildings, or other necessary materials.

Of the money raised, one-half is to be used in China, 15% for student refugee relief in the United States, and the rest in European areas, especially in Poland and France.

Pearson and Denham Place First in Poll To Lead Governments

Only one of the six "four-point" campus offices, the most responsible of undergraduate positions, has developed into a nip-and-tuck contest, results from THE GUILFORDIAN straw-ballot, which reached more than half the Guilford students, have revealed. Some 210 students were questioned in the poll, almost complete coverage being gained in Archdale, Mary Hobbs, The Pines, and Kent's. Two-thirds coverage was obtained in Founders, one-half in Cox, and one-quarter among the Day students. The following report is based on these votes.

Polls will be open for spring election in Memorial hall from 8 a. m. until 4 p. m. on Tuesday.

The closest major contest was between Elois Mitchell, original nominee, and Robert Rohr, petitioned candidate, for the editorship of the QUAKER, college year-book. Mainly on the strength of backing in Cox and Founders, Rohr enjoyed a four vote margin. In the race for the other "four-point" offices, Roy Leake took a two to one lead over John Hobby as managing editor of THE GUILFORDIAN, Paul Pearson piled up an overwhelming margin over Marion Ralls for the business manager post of the bi-weekly, and Evelyn Pearson had double the following of Margaret Jones in the contest for the presidency of the Women's Student government; Tobey Laitin, editor-in-chief candidate for THE GUILFORDIAN,

Saint-Saens Composition Feature of Fine Arts

Saint-Saens' Danse Macabre will be the theme of the next Fine Arts club meeting to be held in the Music building on the evening of April 9.

Ruth Lockwood will read the story of the composition. Doris Lane will sketch the life of Saint-Saens preceding a recording of "Danse Macabre."

Future meetings will feature students planning to give recitals. At each meeting they will sing a group of songs for practice purposes.

'Quaker' Editors Say Book Is on Schedule; Photography Changed

The Quaker, Guilford college annual, is now nearing completion and will probably be out before final exams if everything goes according to schedule, it has been announced here this week.

Perrine Bilyeu, editor, and Elois Mitchell, staff member, have been working on general write-ups and picture identifications, with L. M. Gideon doing some of the sports and club blurbs. Working on ads have been Paul Carruthers, business manager of the publication, and Francis Fowler.

According to a staff member, this year's annual will be different from those of past years in that, instead of using miscellaneous snapshots taken at random by students, the snapshots will be grouped under heads and will have been taken by Quaker photographers. The reason for this is that no pictures were entered in the contest held last fall. Mr. Hugh White of the college community is doing all the group photography.

Also in the field of snapshots come the unusual campus shots, which will,

Milner Among Educators To Meet Here, March 27

Guilford college will be host to the North Carolina chapter of the National Council on Religion in Higher Education, on Thursday, March 27. The group consists of staff members of various schools who are interested in the religious approach.

Committee in charge consists of Dr. Clyde A. Milner, of Guilford college; Dr. Robert House, University of North Carolina; and Dr. Price A. Gwynn, head of the Department of Education at Davidson college.

Educators have been invited from Catawba college, Davidson college, Duke university, Elon college, Greensboro college, Guilford college, High Point college, Meredith college, University of North Carolina, Woman's college, U. N. C., Salem college, and Wake Forest college.

Others from Guilford are Mrs. Clyde A. Milner, Dean A. D. Beittel, and Professor and Mrs. E. Daryl Kent.

Furnas to Give Party For Guilford Dramatists

Dr. and Mrs. Philip W. Furnas will entertain members of the Dramatic council and the cast of "It Pays to Advertise," drama which was presented here March 8, at an informal party in their home this evening at 7:30.

Barker and Pearson To Appear in Concert

Program of Sacred Music Will Mark Easter Sunday in Memorial Hall

Phyllis Barker, accompanied by Evelyn Pearson, will present a program of sacred music on April 13 in Memorial hall at 4 p. m.

Miss Barker, well-known alto, will sing first a group of classical sacred pieces, followed by Miss Pearson at the organ, and concluding with a selection of modern sacred lyrics.

The first group will include Schubert's Ave Maria, Tchaikowsky's The Lord Is My Shepherd, Gounod's Hark! My Soul, It Is the Lord, Aria from Oratorio, Eye Hath Not Seen, from

Tortured Seniors Succumb As Thesis Time Arrives

By BETTE BAILEY

The emaciated figures that you see tottering about the campus, or swooning silently in the stacks are not victims of famines or Victorian vapors. They are seniors, who carry the weighty burden of the senior thesis, one of Guilford's fine old traditions.

The tortured atmosphere affected me, a freshman whose fortification against its dread effects is the thin span of less than four years. Bravely, I set up headquarters in the library with notebook and pencil—there to pounce upon the benumbed victims and worm information from them.

Madeleine Howlett is sticking close to our own back yard with her thesis on "Psychological effect of social life on the campus." Some statistics from her questionnaire, which was filled out by 50 boys and 50 girls on Guilford campus: Dancing is the number one recreational choice of Guilford students; southern students prefer informal dances, while Yankees like formal ones better; skating parties are rated second in the list of social activities, and boys like ping-pong, while girls stick to badminton. Twice as many boys as girls want to date in private, and only a minority of fellows go stag to social functions.

Freddie Binford was another to enlighten me, with his study of "Spectrophotometry," which, according to him, is the measurement of the ab-
