Milner will speak on "Miracle and Morality Plays" on Friday, November 14. Miss Dorothy L. Robert Doak Tells of Days As Guilford Athletic Coach

By CORKY FIELD

Coach Doak, more renowned to present-day Guilford students as a very obliging postmaster, peered across the shadow of the years to tell of his student and coaching days at the college. Mr. Doak was trained in the ranks of that famous Hobbs' Hollow baseball team which used to meet "in a level meadow at any convenient season" (to quote Dorothy Gilbert), and which has sent several Guilford men into big league ball.

Graduating in 1909 with letters in four varsity sports—football, baseball, basketball, and track, Bob Doak returned to his Alma Mater in 1916 to produce some of the most successful teams Guilford has known. Under his leadership baseball came into its own; the team lost but two college games in two years. In 1918, Jonathan Zachary,

Girls Start Bundles For Britain Campaign

Mrs. Wesley Taylor Helps to Organize Relief Work Here

With the help of Mrs. Wesley Taylor of Greensboro, Guilford girls have been organized to do war relief work. Mrs. Taylor is acting in connection with Bundles for Britain and other war relief organizations to interest college girls throughout the state in this work. She collects the contributions of the various colleges and sends them to the New York office of Bundles for Britain where they are packed in kits and sent to England.

At a recent meeting in the auditorium, Rosemary Nunn was elected chairman in charge of organizing relief work on campus. Mrs. Taylor then met with the girls to tell them what sort of things were needed by British girls at this time. Lists of these articles have been posted in the dormitories. Wool will be provided for those girls interested in knitting.

star pitcher, appeared, pitched 10 out of 14 games himself, struck out 84 men, allowed only 43 hits, and maintained a batting average of .360. Two of his teammates, Tom Murchison and Nigel Marlette, went into professional ball with him.

In 1925, with the inspiration of Bob Doak behind them, Guilford's basketball team raised to glory John Gurney Frazier who won a place on All-South Atlantic team as well as a position on the all-state team for four successive years. Frazier's outstanding record of 105 field goals, 35 foul shots, brought a gleam of satisfaction to this former athlete, who sent your reporter scurrying to Miss Gilbert's records.

Hayes Hobnobs with Harpo On Journey to Cinema City

By BETTY WILSON

For the last two weeks, Dr. Francis Hayes of the modern language department has been rubbing shoulders with Harpo Marx and other West coast dignitaries in Hollywood.

The reason for this unexpected trip to the cinema city is an article on folk gestures which he has written for Collier's magazine, and which the editors decided needed something outstanding for illustration.

They conceived the idea of drafting the services of one Harpo Marx, and, since Dr. Hayes knew most about the article, they asked him to light out across country and supervise.

Six or eight years ago, following a friend's suggestion, Dr. Hayes began a study of folklore and of American folk gestures in particular. He defines folk gestures as "gestures which have meaning; they are not nervous gestures, such as doodling or swinging a watch chain." He then proceeded to illustrate a few, the most familiar being a twirling of the forefinger around the head to indicate that a person is a little—er—well, you know.
