

David Evans Designs Hats And Dresses for 'Milady'

A talent that few students know exist on the Guilford campus is that of designing women's wearing apparel. David Evans has been interested in this field for several years, his chief concentration being directed towards hats and evening gowns.

He first realized that his taste was liked by others in 1939 when he won first place in the state art contest. This work was done in water colors. The following year he won first place in the state art contest in the field of creative designing. In 1941-42 he again won a first prize but this time in national art competition. Costume designing and fashion sketching were the fields this time. In 1942 he received superior ratings for the two entries which he submitted in an amateur contest. He has designed evening gowns for actresses Greer Garson and Hedy Lamarr.

David says that this year he has not been as busy creating fashions for the ladies because he lacks the inspiration which Polly Korn gave him last year. He designed several original hat creations which she modeled.

For an original Easter chapeau design, David received $50 last year. At present he often receives checks for hat designs from friends in the north.

David's favorite designers are Lucien Lelong, Adrian, and Omar Kiam.

Bird Club Elects Officers; Plans Future Programs

Campbell brought in the following list of suggested activities for the year: field trips, by individuals and groups; motion pictures; learning bird calls through recordings; inviting outside speakers to meet with the group; individual reading and sharing of such reading with the group. The members were urged to become "bird conscious" and to learn as many of the birds in this area as possible.

The club accepted this program and members made additional suggestions. The first project of the club is to post the college property in order to prevent the killing of birds by hunters.

The membership of this club is offered to anyone interested in birds and willing to work with the club toward the accomplishments of its aims and purposes.

Benedikt Searches for Lost Sheep in Iceland In "The Good Shepherd"

For a new version of the spirit of the Christmas story, one should read The Good Shepherd.

At the beginning of the Christmas season, if possible on the first Sunday of Advent, Benedikt, his dog, and his wether would start out through the desolate mountains of Iceland in search of sheep which had strayed from the rest of the flock that had been gathered before the winter set in.

There were one or two stops for visits among kind friends on the way to the mountains. This year Benedikt was celebrating an anniversary—the 27th time he had made the trip, and he had started making these journeys when he was 27 years old.

Through wind and snow and freezing weather the trinity searched for lost sheep. At times they were close to death, but they had to collect all the sheep they could find and return to the village by Christmas morning. On this 27th Advent Journey, however, Christmas day was spent in getting the animals closer to the valley.

The author gives us a simple touching story of "The good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep." (John 10:11).

to be starting a line of cooks, for his wife is also a cook, as is his son who lives in Jersey City, N. J. He has a daughter now attending A. and T. College in Greensboro.

Reading is David's favorite hobby. He picks out books on religion, history and sociology. Once when he was a little boy he heard a woman sing, "Pass Me Not O Gentle Saviour." This song meant a great deal to the woman who sang it because she had written it herself although she was blind. Ever since, that hymn has been David's favorite. When asked about the movies, David admitted he hadn't seen one in over three years as he has to put in long hours of work here and is too tired to go when he gets home.

Anyone who takes the time to visit with David will find him very friendly and talkative and interested in hearing about student activities. He has a long, tedious job but is ready to give the waiters a cheery "Hello" at 6:30 in the morning or 6:30 in the evening.

Ralph Caskey Follows His Musical Interest Through Life

At present he is tuning pianos for private individuals and for various dealers in the vicinity. He also runs a candy store in the courthouse building.

Mr. Caskey is very objective about his defect. On one choir trip during a concert, an electrical storm caused the lights to go out. He said that if the audience had been "dark-lovers" as he was, everything would have gone off smoothly.

Spanish Club Makes Plans

In spite of a late start, the Spanish club expects to complete a big schedule when plans for activities get underway. Delayed because of Dr. Hayes' departure, the club will organize shortly under Dr. and Mrs. Dunstan's and Mr. Malinowski's direction and will include programs of Latin American folk songs and music.
