Dedicated To The Seniors

A week from now most of us will be immersed in final exams. In a little over two weeks, many of us will be home and looking forward to three months of glorious vacation.

When these three months are up, the majority of us will be back, settling down once more to the job of acquiring an education.

But one group will not be back—a very important group and one that we will miss in all phases of our campus life—the class of '55. This coming week will be set aside as Senior Week and during this time we can show the deep appreciation we feel for this group.

Then will come the day of graduation. On that day they will cease to be college students and will become men and women of the world, completely on their own.

We know that this graduating group has what it takes to succeed. We do not wish to say "Good-bye" to these seniors because we hope they will return to visit us many times in the future. In stead we say, "Good luck and success to all of you."

FLASH!

It has been reported to us that the thesis written by Marie Brewer and Ed Brooks was successfully defended by Marie at the North Carolina Academy of Science. This thesis, written on "The Study and Effect of Salmonella Typhimurium on the Acquired Resistance of Mice to Trichinella Spiralis," won first prize in its class. Congratulations to Marie and Ed.

SENIOR SPOTLIGHT

Raymond E. Chalkley

Ray Chalkley was born in Washington, D. C. He had a normal boyhood, cultivating such hobbies as sports, woodworking, and camping.

"Chief", who is a Physical Education major, minoring in Education and Biology, has been active in many phases of college life, being associated with such organizations as the Mens' Student Government, Future Teachers of America, the Student Affairs Board, the Honor Board, the Marshals, and The Guilfordian. He has been picked by his classmates to be president of his Junior and Senior Classes. Ray has been honored with a Graduate Assistantship to the University of Maryland.

A sports enthusiast, "Razor" has been exceptionally active in intramurals, and has played some JV basketball.

While not at school, Ray has worked on construction, and has been a recreation director at a community center.

As for his future plans, Ray includes — emphatically "Maggie" White, the University of Maryland, the Armed Forces, and coaching—in that order.

'Quaker' Released

The 1955 edition of the "Quaker," the Guilford College yearbook, was released Wednesday May 11. This year's year book edited by Phillis Redman is dedicated to Miss Era Lasley who has served as college registrar for a number of years.

Marty Burton

Marty Burton of High Point, N. C. has been a most active student during her four years at Guilford College. Her major is elementary education and she is minoring in English.

Marty has spent much time working with the W. S. G. Council. During her second year at college, she was sophomore representative from Hobbs and her junior year Marty served as secretary of the council.

Marty was secretary of her class both her freshman and sophomore years. Last year she was chief marshal and was secretary of the Honor Board, which she has served this year as chairman. The W. A. A. cabinet has also received a portion of Marty's time. She has been a member of it for two years and last year was May Day chairman. Also, she worked on the Quaker staff.

Not only is Marty active in extra-curricular activities — she is also an honor student and a member of the Scholarship Society. This year Marty was chosen as a member of the May Court and for her many contributions to Guilford during her stay here, she was elected to Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities.

Marty's plans for the future are indefinite, but from her college career it looks as if her future will be successful.

FULL SPEED AHEAD

With examinations and commencement only a few weeks away, it begins to seem that the end of school is already here. We are inclined, at this time of year, to cut the motor of learning and coast to a standstill.

Don't let this happen! This is one of the most important periods of the year. It is now that we lay the groundwork for all we are to do next year.

Many problems are confronting the new members of the various campus organizations. It seems a great deal easier for us, as individuals to ignore these problems and to think, "we can worry about this next year."

With the building program beginning to roll into full swing and the future to think about it seems this is the time to really dig in and work.

We must be sure that we begin now to set the pace and the trend that we are going to wish to follow next fall.

See Ya Next Year!
