

Competition Now Open for Wilson Fellowships

Competition is now open to college seniors for the Woodrow Wilson graduate fellowships.

Designed to reduce a nationwide shortage of qualified college teachers, the program annually awards 1000 fellowships for first year graduate study at any university of the recipient's choice in the United States or Canada. Candidates are elected only after rigorous screening and personal interviews by one of fifteen regional committees of educators.

Each elected fellow receives a $1500 stipend for living expenses plus full tuition and family allowances.

The program is open to college graduates mainly in the humanities and social sciences. Both men and women are eligible, and there is no limit on the age of the candidate or on the number of years he may have been out of college.

Those who receive awards are not asked to commit themselves to college teaching, but merely to "consider it seriously" as a possible career.

Every candidate for the award must be nominated by a faculty member.

Randall Jarrell, Noted Poet, Slated To Speak at Friday Night Lecture

One of the foremost poets to emerge since the end of the Second World War will be the guest speaker at the Friday night lecture this week. Randall Jarrell, who now makes his home in the Guilford College community, will read and interpret some of his own works for the event.

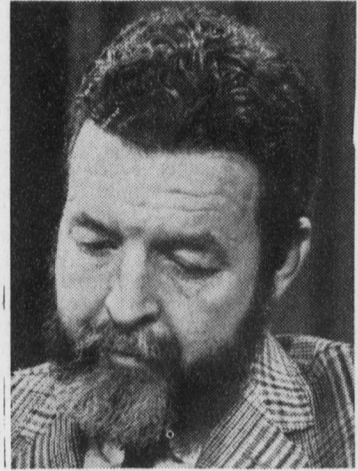

Mr. Jarrell's 8 p.m. talk is being sponsored by the Literary Society and will be held in the College Union Lounge.

A native of Nashville, Tennessee, Mr. Jarrell has lived a great part of his life in Texas, Tennessee, and California. He has been in North Carolina since 1947 as a professor of English at Woman's College here in Greensboro.

His poetry, which first appeared in a book in 1942, is considered excellent by most critics; it is rather intellectual as opposed to emotional and is philosophical, picturesque, and paints a vivid scene. His work has been highly praised by critics Allen Tate, a former Woman's College professor, and John Crowe Ransom.

Much of his work reflects the feelings and attitudes of the soldiers during the Second World War. He is able to express the "idealism and the sense of defeat to which sensitive minds are now subject."

Aside from his poetry, Mr. Jarrell is also noted as a literary critic, a field in which his work is said to have "amused the sophisticates and infuriated the authors."

During 1956-58 Mr. Jarrell was Consultant in Poetry to the Library of Congress in Washington, D. C.

According to his wife, he has "devoted most of his writing time for the past two years to translating Goethe's Faust."

His recreational interests turn to music, tennis, and sports cars.

Mrs. Jarrell, who plans to accompany her husband when he visits the campus for his lecture, reports that, "We love living in the Guilford College community and enjoy driving over to the campus and watching the boys play tag football."

Rhodes Scholarship Competition Begins

Competition for Rhodes Scholarships for 1960 is now underway. The deadline for receiving applications is November 2.

"The selection committee," said Mr. Edward Hudgins, secretary of the selection committee, "is interested in good all-round young men—that is, those who have shown some definite quality of real distinction in leadership, scholastic ability and physical vigor."

Any unmarried male student between 19 and 25 who is at least a junior in college is eligible to compete for one of the awards which each year sends 32 American men to study at England's Oxford University.

A Rhodes Scholarship is worth 750 British pounds annually, which with care is sufficient to cover a Rhodes scholar's expenses for term time and vacation, the committee secretary said.

An interested student may apply either in the state in which he resides or in the state in which he is attending college. Application forms may be obtained by writing or telephoning (Greensboro BR 3-6971, Ext. 233) to D. Edward Hudgins, Jefferson Standard Life Insurance Company, Greensboro.

Armfield Family Donates Gift To Improve Athletic Facilities

Members of the family of W. J. Armfield, Jr. of Asheboro have made a special gift to Guilford College which will enable the college to relocate and improve its athletic facilities and establish the Armfield Athletic Center.

This Center will be located behind the new auditorium now under construction and will include the present baseball diamond. It has been given to honor William J. Armfield, Jr., member of the class of '94, and as a memorial to Britt and W. J. Armfield III. An inscription to this effect will be engraved on a plaque which will be placed on the memorial wall and gate.

In His Honor

William J. Armfield, Jr., long a leading citizen and builder of Asheboro and Randolph County, was prominent in athletics when he was at Guilford College, and he has maintained his interest in the college and its athletic program.

In Their Memory

Britt M. Armfield was an enthusiastic and co-operative member of the Greensboro Advisory Board to Guilford College and a supporter of the Greensboro Division of Guilford College until his death on September 16, 1953.

William J. Armfield III, who died February 1, 1956, attended Guilford and was an active supporter of its programs, especially the organization and development of the Greensboro Division.

According to President Milner the new athletic center will make possible broader student participation and encourage greater alumni interest in the athletic program of the college. The relocation of the athletic fields is a major item in the current Guilford College Development Program which began in 1957 and is scheduled for completion in 1962 when Guilford celebrates 125 years of continuous educational service.

As construction begins on the new auditorium and athletic center Guilfordians are finding themselves somewhat inconvenienced. All home football games have been moved to the Guilford High School football field. The choir is rehearsing above the noise of the machinery digging at the back door of its music building. And students find themselves watching more and more curiously the hole being formed and the red dirt piling up on old Hobbs Field.

But the improvements being made are expected to more than pay for any inconvenience caused this year.
