On November 29-30 the third annual Conference on the Alcohol Problem will be held at Guilford College. Most of the sessions will be held in the New Garden Friends Meeting House.

Tuesday's main speaker will be William Plymat of Preferred Risk Insurance Co., Des Moines, Iowa. He will deliver two addresses and give a talk in chapel discussing alcoholism as an insurance man sees the problem.

Also scheduled for the Tuesday program is Waldo Smith who will tell of his experiences in the training clinic at Keeley Institute. Following his talk the Monthly Business Meeting of the North Carolina Yearly Meeting Ministers will be held.

A 9:00 a.m. address by Howard Wilkerson, chaplain at Duke University, will begin Wednesday's activities. His discussion of "the alcoholic employee" will also be presented in chapel.

At 1:30 Wednesday a representative of the North Carolina Alcoholic Rehabilitation Program will attempt to inform Friends ministers and others as to what the state of North Carolina is doing for alcoholics of the state.

A question and answer period will follow every address except the two chapel talks.

The Guilfordian wishes to remind all students that the three days before and after Thanksgiving are non-cut days. This means that you may have no unexcused absence from classes on November 21, 22, 23, 25, 26, and 28.

MANTOVANI PERFORMANCE SET FOR 8:30 TONIGHT IN COLISEUM

At 8:30 tonight Mantovani and his 45-piece orchestra will appear in person at the Greensboro Auditorium. Tickets are on sale at the Coliseum Box Office and range in price from $2.00 to $4.00.

The dazzling and imaginative orchestrations which breathe new life into familiar tunes and make new melodies glow with warmth and emotion, have made Mantovani and his string-filled orchestra a unique phenomena in the recording industry and a box office sensation in the concert field.

Among the dozens of Manto-

vani recordings available on the London label are many which have passed the million mark in sales, and he recently became the first artist to sell one million stereo records.

Venice-born Annunzio Paolo Mantovani received his early education in England and in his teens tried to follow the wishes of his violinist-father by studying engineering. But his talent and love for music soon surpassed a very mild interest in building bridges and he made his professional debut at 16 playing Max Baruch's violin concerto. Mantovani founded a salon orchestra which he conducted in regular broadcasts over the BBC during the 1930's.

Featuring Mantovani and an orchestra which included 28 strings, the recording Charmaine won Mantovani the first of many gold discs, and heralded an ever-increasing demand for the music which has made him a living legend on the music scene.

Musical Shows Set For Chapel

A series of music programs will be brought to the Upperclassman Chapel on three successive Fridays beginning tomorrow. The programs are being arranged by the Guilford Music Department.

"Favorite Folksongs" has been chosen as the theme for tomorrow's program. Eddie Davis will play the guitar, and Mr. Smyre will sing and comment on the songs throughout the program. Mr. Smyre has not been able to schedule a program for the 25th, yet, but final arrangements have been made for the last program. The theme is "Musical Comedy," a show which will include numbers from "Carrousel," "Brigadoon," "Annie Get Your Gun," and "South Pacific." About fifteen students will participate in this show, and there will be several solos.

Mr. Smyre feels that the "students will enjoy the programs a great deal." This music series as well as the other programs in a series was suggested by the Convocations Committee.

WSG Talent Show Will be Tomorrow In Mem. Auditorium

The women students of Guilford College are presenting their talent show at 7:30 tomorrow evening in Memorial Hall auditorium. There will be an admission fee of 25c.

The program features a new singing group on campus, The Four Corners, who will sing several cock-and-call numbers; Pete Jones, who will give a rendition of Errol Garner at the piano; Jimmy Hedcock singing "A Love Affair to Remember," and Evie Copeland doing a solo from The Sound of Music.

Amanda Allred, Alan Atwell, and Judy James will sing solos. Light violin music will be offered by Frank Walton, and John Huffman will do a comedy routine. At the piano Doug Redmond will play some of his own compositions. For variety, Marshall Rosen will play his accordion, and Karen Karnan will play her guitar, sing ballads, and lead the group in several songs.

A dance routine will be given by Sandy Brown and Pris Hancock; Merle Mallard will play serious music on the piano.

The chairman of the show, Jane Allen, says, "This year's show runs without a theme other than talent, of which we feel Guilford has its share. We promise entertainment."

The Hillel Society will meet this Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the College Union Lounge. Rabbi Asher of Temple Emanuel in Greensboro will speak about the Jewish philosophy during the Babylonian period from 500 B.C. to 500 A.D. and will show the implications of that philosophy in modern Judiac thought.
