

Forty Selected For Awards

The Guilford College Dana Scholarship Committee has announced the selection of forty Dana Scholars for the 1963-64 academic year. To be considered for a Dana Scholarship, men and women must have completed a full academic year, or its equivalent, as duly enrolled students at Guilford College, must have demonstrated marked quality of character and evidence of leadership, and have acquired a minimum academic quality average of 2.00 for the preceding regular college year of nine months.

Dana Scholars will receive grants from $100.00 to the amount of full tuition for the academic year, as may be determined by the Dana Committee. During the academic year, all scholars must meet regularly with the Dana Committee to explore the philosophy of liberal education at Guilford, and the goals, standards, and ideals of the college community, so that they may become leaders in their classes and, by their positions, direct their classmates toward more successful college careers.

The current recipients of the Dana Scholarships, made possible by a $21,000.00 grant from Charles A. Dana, New York philanthropist and industrialist, are listed below.

Leah Harris Participates In Living Experiment

Leah Harris, a Guilford College senior, spent this summer in England as a member of the Experiment in International Living program. Through an application given to her by Dr. J. Floyd Moore of the Religion Department, Leah was chosen by the Greensboro Inter-Club Council as its representative for the program.

On June 16, she went to Putney, Vermont, where a four-day orientation session was held. Members of the program who went to England, Germany, and Poland departed on June 20, arriving in London the next day. From London Leah proceeded to Manchester, England, where the family she was to live with, the Davenports, met her.

Mr. Davenport is a technical director of a rubber firm which provides rubber for shoes. They have two daughters. Shelia, 19, attends Bedford College which is a branch of London University. The younger daughter, Eileen, 14½, attends grammar school, our equivalent of high school.

Leah lived with the Davenports for two weeks. Then, along with other members of the program in England, she hiked to the Lake District. Leah is quite proud of having climbed the highest mountain in England, Scafell Pike, 3,200 feet high. The climb took approximately seven hours. During the hike, the group stayed in Youth Hostels along the way. After the hike, Leah returned to live for another two weeks with the Davenports. Her family took her to many of the places of interest in England. They also taught her how to knit, a talent which she is now sharing with the girls of Mary Hobbs Hall.

After the completed stay with her family, Leah then went to Malvern and met with the six other groups located in Scotland and England. Here they heard lectures on the British systems of government and education. Afterwards, they split up into groups which evaluated the various aspects of their summer.

During the last four days she was in England Leah visited many of the famous sights in London, including Westminster Abbey. She also went to Stratford-on-Avon to see the Shakespearean play, A Comedy of Errors.

On August 18, Leah left London and arrived in New York the following day. Speaking of her summer, Leah says, "The best part of the trip was living with my family. They were wonderful!"

As senior Women's Student Council representative from Hobbs Hall, vice-president of Hobbs, May Day chairman and a marshal, Leah is a busy figure on campus.

Founded in 1932, the Experiment in International Living is a private non-profit organization in the field of international education. It is basically an educational program to teach people of one country to live with those of other countries, the goal being that of advancing world peace at the individual level. The members taking part in the program are introduced to the country on its own terms through the eyes of its natives.

A Cappella Choir's 36th Season

Guilford College's A Cappella Choir, now in its 36th season, would like to take this opportunity to thank the old members for their support and to welcome all new members. We extend a cordial welcome to anyone interested in joining us for regular rehearsals on Monday, Wednesday, Friday at 1:30, and Thursday at 4:30. For anyone, not only choir members, wishing to participate in The Messiah, rehearsals will be held on Tuesday afternoons at 4:30.

Each year the choir renders numerable programs throughout North Carolina. In the spring the annual tour takes the choir alternately to New York and Florida. These two varied trips contribute invaluable experience and spirit to the choir. Please join us.

Guilford's Faculty Adds Nine New Members

John Moses Ripkin is the newly-appointed Assistant Professor of Religion and Director of yearly meeting relations. He holds both the A.B. and the M.A. from Guilford College in the field of religion, having received the first graduate degree ever granted by the college. He comes to teaching from a most successful ministry in the White Plains Friends Meeting. Two of his daughters, Carolyn (Mrs. Richard Ott) and Susan (Mrs. James Varner) graduated from Guilford. He and his wife, Maybelle, have another young daughter, Rosanne, still at home.

Earl Wallace Redding, our new Acting Dean of Students and Assistant Professor of Philosophy, received his A.B. from Guilford with a major in religion. He served as minister of Belvidere Friends Meeting and then of Miami, Florida Friends. He received his M.A. from the University of Miami. His concern for Cuban Friends and refugees led him to work with the government program for resettlement, which came to require all of his time. He and his wife, Helen Duke Redding, a Montreat College graduate, have two boys and a girl.

Wesley Thompson Andrews, Jr., of Greensboro, has been appointed Assistant Professor of Economics. He holds the A.B. from Duke University and the M.B.A. from the University of North Carolina. He taught the beginning accountant courses in the Executive Program at the University of North Carolina and has also taught at the American Institute of Banking and worked as an accountant in industry. He and his wife have three small children.

National Repertory Theatre At UNC-G This Month

The National Repertory Theater is coming to Greensboro on October 10th. This company is a non-profit organization which hopes to produce classics at low admission prices and yet retain high theatrical standards. In the words of Eva Le Galliene, the company's most distinguished member, the goal of the National Repertory Theater is "to play just as well in Appleton as on Broadway."

Miss Le Galliene deserves as much attention herself as does the company for which she works. She started in the theater in 1914. She was one of the first of her time to organize a company similar to the National Repertory Theater. Her twelve Ibsen translations are Modern Library standards.

On the present tour, the National Repertory Theater, founded in 1961 by Michael Dewell and Frances Ann Dougherty, will visit twenty major cities in the United States.

Mr. Dewell has high aspirations for his group. Within ten years he plans "to have four companies out on fifty two-week tours, each company with four plays in its repertory. Every city in America with a theater or auditorium would be visited by at least one of the four companies."

This month in Greensboro the National Repertory Theater will present Ring Round the Moon on Friday, October 11; The Seagull, on Saturday, October 12; and The Crucible on Tuesday, October 15. Half-price tickets for $2.00 are available for any of these performances from Mr. D. Deagon, Jerry Feinburg, John Lindsay, or call 769-6811.

James Burnell Gutsell, Guilford Assistant Professor of English this year, holds the B.A. with honors in English from the University of the South. He received the M.A. from the University of Connecticut, where he has been a part-time instructor and has completed most of the requirements for the Ph.D. In connection with his doctorate he spent the past year in London working on his dissertation. His wife is a graduate of Swarthmore College, with an M.A. in English from the University of Connecticut.

Oliver Judd Ingraham, Assistant Professor of Natural Science, comes to college teaching after five years in high school science classrooms. A Friend, he has most recently been science instructor at Friendsville Academy in Tennessee. He holds the B.A. from Colorado College, and the M.A. in Basic Science from the University of Colorado. He and his wife have young daughters.

Philip Caddell Kennedy, Guilford's new Assistant Professor of Art Appreciation, holds the B.A. and M.A. from the University of Redlands, California, and has done work towards his Ph.D. from there. He has traveled extensively, and studied Buddhist religious art in Japan and the Far East for one semester. His experience includes serving as Museum Instructor in Humanities at McKim-Devore College, Lebanon, Ill. His wife is also a graduate of the University of Redlands.

Josephine Lumpkin Moore, who has been teaching part-time on the campus and at the Greensboro Division, has been appointed assistant professor of history for this year. Mrs. Moore has an A.B. from Trinity University, an A.M. from the University of Michigan, and the Ph.D. from Cornell University. Her experience includes work at the Library of Congress under a privately endowed fellowship, and an assistantship in history during her doctorate studies at Cornell. She is the wife of Wallace C. Moore of Greensboro, and they have three daughters, the oldest of whom is a National Merit Scholar at Rice University. An accomplished musician, Mrs. Moore is currently organist and choir director at the Sedgewick Presbyterian Church.

Khairati Lall Sindwani, newly-appointed Assistant Professor of Sociology, is a native of India who has been in this country since 1958 studying for the Ph.D. degree in Sociology and Social Work at Ohio State University. He received this degree in June, 1962. He comes to Guilford from the post of Assistant Professor of Sociology at Hampton Institute. His degrees also include a B.A. from Punjab State University and an M.A. from Delhi University in India, as well as an M.A. from Florida State University. His wife is studying for her doctorate in the field of child development.

John Orland Rundell, who has been appointed instructor in Biology, has an A.B. and a M.S. from Eastern Michigan University, where he assisted in the biology laboratory as an undergraduate and held a teaching fellowship during his graduate work. He and his wife have two children.

Elmer Cleveland Painter has been appointed Assistant Professor of Psychology. His A.B. degree is from Guilford College. He also holds the Th.B. from Piedmont Bible Institute and the B.D. from Southeastern Baptist Seminary.
