Sixteen girls are running for Homecoming Queen, 1968.

Seniors who have been nominated are Jane McCauley of Tarrytown, N. Y., representing Shore Dorm; Penny Kyle of Galax Va., Frazier Apartments; Billy Forrest of Mount Airy, Senior Class; Lynn Culler of Winston-Salem, Monogram Club; and Martha Glenn Bradshaw of Rose Hill, Woman's Student Council.

Juniors vying for the title are Susan Blair of Vandenberg AFB, Calif., sponsored by the Choir;

Susan Ratterree of Winston-Salem, cheerleaders; Martha Petty, also of Winston-Salem, Junior Class; and Pam Pancoast of Purcellville, Va., Milner Hall.

Three sophomores contending for the honor are

Lynn Marshall of Greensboro, representative of WRA; Linda Sale of Ronda, Sophomore Class; and Marilyn McIntyre of McLean, Va., College Union.

The freshmen running for the title are Linda Willis of Greensboro, sponsored by the MIG; Ann Whitley of High Point, Freshman Class; and Kathy Andrews of Great Neck, N. Y., Cox Hall.

Homecoming queen chairman Nancy Nundy has announced that voting for the queen and her court will take place Monday night in all dormitories.

N.Y. Seminars Offered To Guilford Students

This year Guilford College is offering to its students two-week long seminars in New York City each providing one hour college credit.

The first seminar is scheduled to run from Dec. 14 to 21. It will be limited to 40 students and will cover three areas of study, each handled by a separate department. The Political Science Department will study the city government and the problems with which it must deal successfully to meet the changing needs of its growing population. Resources will be drawn from the government of New York City.

The History Department will study the United Nations and its role in an increasingly interdependent world.

The Sociology Department will investigate the University and its human consequences—congestion, housing, employment, education, delinquency, etc.

The first two or three days will be spent in a survey of the U.N. and aspects of New York City government and life. About four days will be spent in the three areas of specific study.

The three departments of study will include lectures, tours of observation and inquiry and individual research. From the total enrollment of 40, each department will have from 10 to 15 students. Three faculty members will be selected by the Dean of the College or the department chairman to accompany the group and help carry out the program.

The group will be housed at the Grand Central YMCA Hotel. The cost will be about $80.00 per student.

The second seminar will be on contemporary society and the arts. It will be between semesters in January for a seven-day period. The costs will be approximately the same as the December trip with $13.00 extra to cover the round-trip flight.

Students wishing to go to either seminar should fill in the registration form and return it to Claude Shotts. Also, a box will be provided in the cafeteria and in the library.

YDC Organized

Temporary officers for the Guilford College chapter of the Young Democrats Club have been named, according to Barbara Anne Steegmuller, president.

"We were all waiting for someone to start the organization, but it seems most of the active ones graduated last spring. So we just got together and started it ourselves," said Miss Steegmuller.

"We" refers to eight Democrats, all freshmen, who have Dr. William Carroll of the Political Science Department for advisor. Other officers are Chris Folger, vice president; Maureen Mulhum, secretary; and Vinetta Bell, treasurer.

The YDC plans a joint mock election on campus with the Young Republicans later this month, and want to bring in several prominent state politicians throughout the semester.

Wage Problems Discussed

By CRAIG CHAPMAN

The recent Poor People's March and last year's demonstrations at Duke University have focused increasing attention on the wage scales of non-professional workers on college campuses.

At Guilford the problem is increasingly complex, since unlike Duke, it has no incisive endowment to fall back on. In fact, it is increasingly difficult for many small private liberal arts colleges such as Guilford to continue in operation.

This problem is due to the spiraling per capita cost of educating a small number of students and the continued stinginess of the general public toward education. Despite this background, in recent years it has grown increasingly popular for outsiders to blame college administrators for the failure of their respective institutions to pay non-professional workers the $3,000 to $3,600 yearly income they needed to stay above the poverty level.

Employees on the Guilford College campus are paid from $1.25 to $1.75 an hour (the average is $1.40) for a maximum 42-hour week. In addition the college offers such non-unionized personnel a group insurance rate, six paid holidays, a week's paid vacation, several days off at Christmas, and a week's sick leave. If an employee lasts ten years at his job, his paid vacation is increased to 11 days.

Choir to Present Vivaldi's Gloria

For the first time in decades, The Guilford College Choir will not present Handel's Messiah at Christmastime.

"I don't know why The Messiah should be traditional," commented choir director Eldon K. Moen. "Tradition is fine and dandy, but I think it's time we expanded our horizons. I believe students must graduate with the knowledge of more than one major work."

The 80-member group, one of the largest in many years, has already begun work on Vivaldi's Gloria, to be performed Sunday, Dec. 15. Faculty and other members of the community may participate in the annual event, at which the regular season a cappella choir expands to become the Guilford College Community Choir.

Moen plans to have the customary orchestra accompaniment for the Christmas performance.

The tour choir, which will number approximately 44, has planned its annual tour for semester break, from Wednesday, Jan. 22, to Sunday, Feb. 2. According to custom, this year's concert tour will be to Florida. Several engagements have already been arranged on the east coast, including Brevard Junior College in Melbourne, Fla.

In addition to the oratorio, the concert choir has been invited to sing in Mount Airy, Graham, and Asheboro during the holiday season. Second semester plans tentatively include learning and Faure Requiem, which has never been performed here before.

"A college explores changes, so why is music different?" added Moen.

Taylor-McLarty New Co-Editor

Co-editors have been named for the 1968-69 Quaker, the Guilford College yearbook. They are Jill Taylor, a junior from New Concord, Ohio, and Jim McLarty, a senior from Asheville.

They succeed Janet Ghezzi, a junior who was selected by the Publications Board last spring to head the annual staff.

Miss Taylor, a transfer student from Ohio University, was a journalism major there and was a member of her high school's nationally award-winning newspaper staff for four years.

McLarty was the photographer for The Quaker last year.
