

Conference On Women At UNC-G Saturday

"Traditions in Transition", a conference on women, will be held this Saturday, March 23, from 9:30 am - 5:00 pm, in Elliott Hall, UNC-G. The conference is sponsored by the UNC-G Committee on Women's Studies, with a grant from the North Carolina Committee for Continuing Education in the Humanities.

The program will begin with coffee and registration ($2.50 including lunch) at 9:30 in Cone Ballroom. At 10:00, a slide-lecture on "Recurring Images of Women" will be presented by Dr. Helene Roberts, assistant professor of art history and curator of Visual Collections at the Fine Arts Library at Harvard's Fogg Art Museum.

From 11-12:30, panels on different subjects of concern to women will meet. These include: "The Changing Roles of Women and Men in the Family," "Political Decision Making," "Changing Religious Values," "Changing Career Patterns," "The Contemporary Feminist Movement," and "Images of Women in Literature and the Arts."

Among the participants in these panels will be State Representative Margaret Kee-see; chairwomen of the Guilford County Democratic Woman, Zoe Barbee; Jim Clark Director of the Ministry for Social Change; Linda McGee, Executive Director of the N.C. Academy of Trial Lawyers; Nancy Dunn, State Coordinator of the National Organization for Women, and Elaine Showalter, editor of Women's Liberation and Literature.

Condolences

We wish to extend our condolences to Mrs. Treva Mathis, Acting Director of the Library. Her husband, William S. Mathis, died March 13.

Boelte Selected

Mr. Edwin R. Boelte, Director of the Administration of Justice Program, is one of six people who have been asked to represent 175 institutions from 8 states, with LEEP Programs like Guilford.

The meeting will be held March 25-26 at the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration regional office in Atlanta and will be concerned with present and possible future operations of the LEEP effort.

At 12:45, a luncheon honoring Ellen Black Winston, U.S. Commissioner of Welfare (1963-67), who has donated her papers to the UNC-G library, will be held in the North Dining Hall.

After lunch, workshops will be held from 2:00 - 3:30. Topics include: "The Status of Women: Wages, Housing, and Welfare," "Women Writers in the Marketplace," "Child Care: Needs of Working, Professional, and Volunteer Women," "Changing Concepts of Self," "New Research on Women," and "The Problems of Re-entry: School and Work."

After a coffee break from 3:30 - 3:45, the program will conclude with a general meeting to hear reports on the panels and workshops held during the day.

The cost for the conference - including lunch - is $2.50. The public is invited.

Koenig To Speak On Crisis Of Presidency

by Dave Owens

"The Crisis of Presidential Accountability" is the topic to be explored Friday, March 22, at Guilford College in the second of a three-part series on "The Presidency and the Executive Branch Under the Constitution."

Dr. Louis W. Koenig, professor of government at New York University, will discuss that subject in a meeting at 8:15 p.m. in Dana Auditorium. Afterward, he will be questioned by a panel of authorities on government as well as by members of the audience.

Earlier in the day, starting at 3 p.m., the panel will hold a discussion on the crisis of Presidential accountability in the Moon Room of Dana.

Panel members will be Richard N. Current, Distinguished Professor of History at UNC-Greensboro and vice president of the Southern Historical Association; William Keech, associate professor of political science and research associate in the Institute for Research in Social Science at UNC-Chapel Hill; and Edwin M. Yoder, Jr., associate editor of the Greensboro Daily News.

"Since its establishment in 1937 the power and the influence of the Executive Office of the President have tended to increase at the expense of the much older Cabinet and regular departments," according to William Carroll, chairman of the political science department at Guilford. "Some of the consequences of that tendency for presidential accountability will be examined."

Koenig is author of three books. When his latest, "The Chief Executive," first appeared in 1964 it was praised by the New York Times as "the best full-length study of the Presidency we now have."

In a revised edition published by Harcourt, Brace & World, he places the Johnson Administration in the framework of analysis used in the first edition and includes new material on Presidential values and styles.

There also is a new section comparing the President with other U.S. executives -- governors and mayors.

Koenig, professor of government at NYU since 1950, previously taught at Bard College and worked in Washington for the State Department, Budget Bureau and the first Hoover Commission.

His other books are "The Invisible Presidency" and "The Presidency Today" (with Edward S. Corwin). He is editor of "The Truman Administration" and has been published in American Heritage, The Nation and Saturday Review.

The series on the Presidency and the Executive Branch under the Constitution is sponsored by Guilford College in conjunction with the Greensboro chapters of the National Council of Jewish Women, the League of Women Voters, and the Young Women's Christian Association.

The three events are made possible by a matching grant to Guilford from the N.C. Committee for Continuing Education in the Humanities according to Dr. Carroll.

The Committee is funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities, whose purpose is to involve academic humanists and community adults in examining issues of public policy, he explained.

The final program in the series will be March 28.

Scholarship for Accountants

The North Carolina Society of Accountants recently initiated a scholarship fund. This scholarship program designed to provide financial assistance to deserving students who indicate firm intentions to continue their education beyond high school in accounting and who have indicated an interest in profession of public accounting.

Students enrolled in four-year college or university who have committed themselves to a major in accounting throughout the remainder of their college career may apply during the final quarter semester of their second year. Tuition scholarship awards $500.00 per year for the last two years apply to students enrolled in four-year college or universities. Scholarship awards will be based on academic achievement and financial need.

Accounting majors should see Don Woodside, Financial Aid Director, for further information.

Sebo Candidacy Correction Made

The Guilfordian wishes to apologize for the error in the last issue of the Guilfordian in which we stated that political science professor Dr. Katherine Sebo, a Democratic candidate for State Senate, would face incumbent Senator McNeill Smith in the primary.

We were wrong on two counts. First, there is no primary in Guilford County for the N.C. Senate. Also, Dr.

Sebo is not running against Sen. Smith. There are three Senate seats from this county, and Sebo, Smith, and Lynwood Smith are all running together as Democrats to fill those seats. The three will face three Republicans in the November election.

The Guilfordian sincerely regrets the error, and apologizes particularly to Dr. Sebo and Sen. Smith.
