Designing a humanistic major

twelfth course in the Humanistic Studies Major. The twelve courses can not include any course you take to fulfill your general distribution requirements and you must earn a grade of C or better in each course to have it count toward the Major.

You can apply to become a Humanistic Studies Major as early as your freshman year but you must apply no later than the end of the first semester of your junior year. The actual application procedure includes such steps as preparing a well-written statement describing your course of study, working out a plan and set of dates for the culminating project, and submitting a set of materials to your sponsor and the Council for their approval.

If you think you might want to become a Humanistic Studies Major, contact a member of the Council for more details, and for advice about whether the Major can best meet your interests. Don't feel you must be certain that you want Humanistic Studies before you seek out someone from the Council; all the members of the Council are available to you for exploratory discussions and information.

ICP offers scholarship; full tuition and expenses

Larry A. Welke, president of ICP -- International Computer Programs, Inc. -- the oldest and largest publisher for the information processing industry, has announced the second annual ICP Scholarship. # PIRG pursues asbestos offenders

By Linda Biggs

The Guilford chapter of the North Carolina Public Interest Research Group (NCPiRG) met on Thursday, September 6, to discuss projects for the coming year. First on the agenda was the discussion of general business which included establishment of the Guilford PIRG local board and its chairperson/treasurer. The responsibility of the board officer(s) is to maintain a line of communication between the community senate and PIRG and it was decided that Linda Biggs would fill this position. State board representatives were also chosen to attend and report on state meetings of NCPiRG. These are Suzanne Sullivan and Meg Horton.

Next was an announcement concerning the refund system which is scheduled during the week of September 17th in Founders lobby. Hours will be 8-10 a.m. on Monday the 17th, 10-12 on Tuesday, 12-2 on Wednesday, 2-4 on Thursday, and 4-6 on Friday. PIRG's refund system is designed for students who strongly object to PIRG's activities and wish to withdraw their support of the group. The amount of the refund, originally included in the student activities fee, is $1.65 per semester. It was decided that a questionnaire should also be available during the refund week so that students could have a chance to explain their reasons for wishing not to support PIRG.

The next matter of business was an announcement of the asbestos press conference which is to be held in Greensboro at the Sears brake shop, on September 13th, in Friendly Center. Dave Austin, and a

North Carolina Occupational Safety and Health representative will conduct the conference which is organized to publicize the release of the 80 page asbestos report researched in part by Guilford students and compiled by PIRG.

After the discussion of general business, members separated into their project groups to discuss plans and strategies. Present projects include the Nestle's boycott, nuclear transportation, toxic substances, status offenders, and mass transportation in Greensboro. Future projects might include investigations of medical costs and care, draft reinstatement, political campaign payoffs, women in the workforce and air pollution monitoring. Guilford PIRG meetings are held every Thursday evening at 7:45 in the Passion Pit.
