

Lady Quakers take crown

By Mary Busken

Guilford's Lady Quakers, with a sparkling 25-8, are moving up. Ever since their disappointing loss at the East Tennessee State Invitational, Coach Currie's squad has been on the rampage in quest of a berth in the nationals.

In the matches preceding the Carolinas Conference Tournament, the Lady Quakers handed defeats to UNC-Asheville, Mars Hill, WSSU, Wake Forest, A&T, High Point, and Wingate. Because of the team's consistent winning ways of late, Guilford was favored to win going into the Carolinas Conference Tournament, hosted at the Ragan Brown Fieldhouse last weekend.

In the first round of tournament play on Friday, the Lady Quakers easily downed Elon. Then on Saturday, the squad lost to a tough team from High Point, which moved Guilford into the loser's bracket. After soundly defeating ACC, Coach Currie led her squad into the finals to square off against the scrappy High Point team once again.

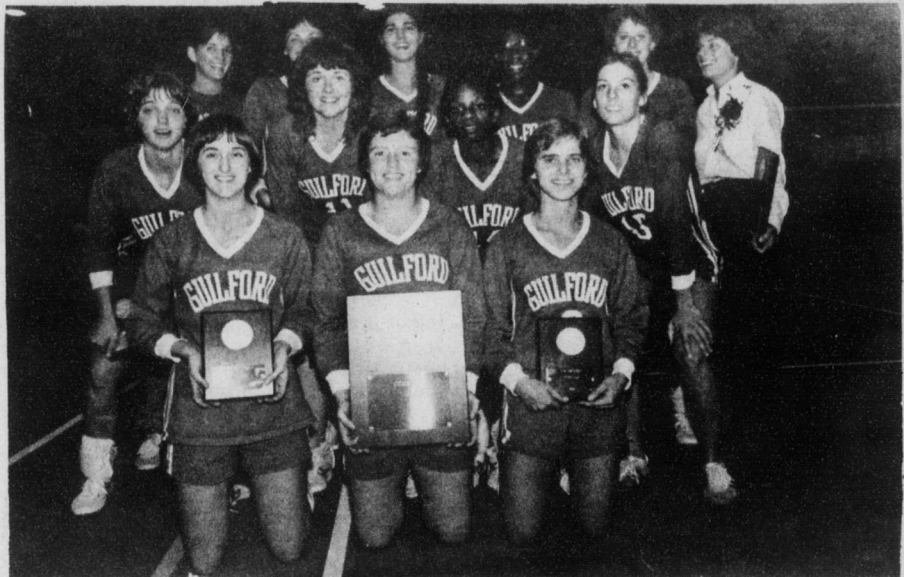

In the finals, the Lady Quakers were in a must win situation -- they had to eliminate High Point in two straight three out of five matches. In the nailbiting action, Guilford lost the first game of the first match, but bounced back to annihilate the High Point squad in six straight games, 3-1, 3-0.

Named to the All-Tournament squad were Terri Heath, Lynn Zahurak, and Cintonya Allison, who was also chosen at last year's tournament. The same three women were also All-Conference selections, with Heath and Zahurak repeating this achievement.

However, the spotlight fell on Terri Heath, Guilford's 5'9" power spiker from Greensboro. Heath was honored as the Carolinas Conference MVP. Likewise, Coach Gayle Currie was named the Conference Coach of the Year for the second consecutive season.

Looking ahead, the Lady Quakers battle some tough competition, namely Wake Forest, UNC-G, and Carolina. Currie's squad then moves on to the NCAAIAW State Tournament, in which they placed sixth last year. This season, Guilford's women's volleyball team became a member of the NAIA Conference, which will enable them to participate in regional and national competition. Judging from their outstanding play thus far, a berth in the national championship is not out of reach for the Lady Quakers.

The Lady Quakers, Carolinas Conference Champs

All-tourney selections, Heath and Zahurak, block spike.

Guilford College Notebook

An exhibition of West African tribal art will be held Nov. 2-26 in the Gallery of Founders Hall at Guilford College. Susan Vogel, associate curator of primitive art at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City, will lecture on the exhibit at 7:30 p.m., Sunday, Nov. 16, in the Commons Room of Founders. The public is invited.

Bob is interested in finding Buddhist oriented companions who would like to participate in an informal group sitting picture (zazen or other). Those interested call Bob at 273-2302 in the evening.

G. William Domhoff, a Professor of Sociology at the University of California and author of The Powers That Be: Processes of Ruling Class Domination in America, will speak on Wednesday, November 5 at 8 p.m. in Sternberger Auditorium. His topic will be: "Democrats or Republicans: To Whom Does it Matter, and in What Ways?" Admission is free and all are invited.

President Rogers will speak on "Research on Moral Development" at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday, November 5 in Founders Hall. The public is invited to hear the address, one in a series on "Moral Education" sponsored by the Guilford College Colloquium.

Students of the Research Methods class, Psychology 301, will be conducting a survey on Thursday and Friday, November 6 and 7. The survey was designed in conjunction with Jane Caris, Director of Counseling, and Bobby Doolittle, Campus Physician, in order to provide data helpful in expanding and improving College Health Services. A number of persons have been selected at random and will be asked to complete the survey. We would like to encourage you to complete the questionnaire and return it to the person who gave it to you. You will be given an envelope in which to place your questionnaire, which is completely anonymous. Please participate if you have been selected. Results of the campus-wide survey will be provided to the Guilfordian when they are available.

REMINDER TO ALL STUDENTS WHO ARE PLANNING TO PRE-REGISTER FOR SPRING: Avoid any delays or hold-ups at pre-registration by clearing up any amounts that you owe at the Business Office -- monthly payments, library fines, etc.

When E.F. Hutton Talks . . . Will You Be There To Listen? Harry Francisco, a representative of E.F. Hutton, will be the guest speaker at the accounting club meeting Sunday, November 9 at 7:30 in Boren Lounge. You don't have to be an accounting major to attend, so if you've ever wondered what type of career opportunities there are in a firm such as this one, we encourage you to come.

The Theatre of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro will present "Buried Child," the off-Broadway play, written by actor-playwright Sam Shepard, that captured the 1979 Pulitzer Prize for Drama. The play deals with America's heartland, the Midwest, as the scene of decay and disintegration of a family. It will be performed at 8:15 p.m. November 5-8 and at 2:15 p.m. November 9 in Aycock Auditorium on the UNC-G campus. Tickets are available in advance by telephoning the box office at 379-5575 weekdays from 1:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m.

A half or full size refrigerator, preferably used and with a freezer, is wanted for the Tri-College observatory. It is needed to store photographic plates and film. If you have one to sell contact Sheridan Simon in King B-27 or on extension 237.

Plans are proceeding for a Thanksgiving-week seminar in New York from November 22 to 29. The Seminar will follow the general plan of the Fall Break with special emphasis on the study of citizen's action to solve problems that affect the communities in which they live. It will open the way for students to understand their role as future citizens. There will be free time to visit museums and theatres and pursue other interests in the city. The cost is $30 for roundtrip carpool plus meals and subway fares. For further information and applications contact the Center for Off Campus Education in the basement of Founders Hall.

For those of you that don't already know: Climbing and Wilderness classes are being offered to the Guilford College Community. The next weekend class will be on November 21-23. These courses will be offered on a monthly basis provided that the weather does not become prohibitive. For further information, contact Michael Perlis at 852-7536 or Box 17395.

During this week, all Guilford students will be receiving a copy of a tabloid listing courses at the three consortium schools which are not common to the three campuses. Guilford students will note that the courses listed for Bennett and Greensboro are not ordinarily offered at Guilford. Should you wish to register for any of these courses, please consult the Registrar's Office to see when the courses are offered. The Registrar's Office will also have course schedules for UNC-G, A&T, and High Point College for your use during pre-registration for Spring.

Sharon Parks, assistant professor of Religion and Psychology at the Harvard Divinity School, will speak for the Guilford College fall colloquium series on November 12 at 7:30 p.m. in Founders Hall. The subject is "Young Adult Moral and Faith Development: the Functions of Imagination and Quaker Insights."

Coffeehouse: BIG Coffeehouse coming your way November 6. Brian Huskey is the performer and he is the best! The Coffeehouse is going to be in the Passion Pit so don't pass it by. Take a break this Thursday and come hear Brian Huskey from 9:00 to 12:00.