

The GUILFORDIAN

VOL. 74 No. 7 GUILFORD COLLEGE, GREENSBORO, N.C. OCT. 9, 1989

photo by Charles Almy

Distinguished Quaker visitor Landrum Bolling after the panel discussion entitled "Views on Israeli/Palestinian Peace Prospects" in the Gallery last Wednesday.

Senate passes visitation reform

Peter Smith
News Editor

A new visitation policy could be in effect as early as January of 1990 after the Guilford College Community Senate passed proposed amendments to the current visitation policy last Wednesday.

The previous Guilford policy states that visitation by members of the opposite sex cannot take place between the hours of 1 a.m. and 9 a.m. The new proposal will establish a 24-hour visitation policy with denial rights. Denial rights are described in the new policy as the right for any resident of the room to "refuse entry to his or her room to anyone except the roommate."

Although the current policy passed with relative ease, some members of the Senate expressed concern over the policy because it did not directly state each roommate's rights as far as refusing entry to a residence room. There was also some interest expressed in adding the right for roommates to establish individual contractual agreements different from the general residence hall or campus-wide policy.

The new policy has been headed up by the Student Residence Council and Beth Tate, the vice-president of the Senate Executive Council. Both the S.R.C. and Tate have been working throughout the fall in drafting the new policy and collecting opinions from Guilford students concerning the viability of the new policy.

"Generally, we were pleased with the final outcome," said Chrissi Lawrence, co-chairperson for the Student Residence Council. "I think it was good that we put in those other policies because each hall should be able to decide on what is best for them. This also might help roommates work together in deciding how they want to deal with this."

see VISITATION page 4 >

Campus changes are just around the corner

Eric Dawson
Staff Writer

Dramatic changes will be occurring on Guilford's campus sooner than many realize.

Work on the telecommunications building, for example, has already begun, and that complex is just one in a series of changes designed to remodel the campus.

Though some of the long-term plans are still in the conceptual stage, those deemed necessary are expected to be finished within a period of about four years.

Completion of the telecommunications building and the fiberoptics network are the first two priorities. Next in order of importance is construction of a group of on-campus apartments that will house up to 200 people.

Another priority item is the addition of a playing floor in the Ragen-Brown Fieldhouse which would alleviate the overcrowding conditions in the main gym.

see CAMPUS' page 4 >

photo by Jennifer Stebbing

Eric Buck and Charles Almy are ecstatic as they flash the proceeds from the sale of t-shirts for the Milner Luau.

INSIDE

Freedom is on a bicycle

P A G
E
6

LIFE IN HELL

BAD LUCK

FLYING BRICKS
CROSSING YOUR PATH IS A SURE SIGN OF ILL-FORTUNE.

P A
G
E
8

Noell leads women's soccer team

P A
G
E
10