

The GOOFORDIAN

Vol. 2, No. 1

Gooford College, Greensboro, N.C.

News Lies

Food improves; rodents vanish

Studies show that last month the food quality in the cafeteria rose sharply.

On a sadder note, the squirrels and the cats that we love to see around the Gooford campus have been strangely disappearing all month.

Hell freezes over; deadline met

A High Point meteorologist confirmed that Hell did freeze over yesterday, but that it "ain't as though people are skiing down there, or anything like that." In related news, The Goofordian met deadline last week. "Meeting deadline was a weird kind of feeling," said Goofordian Editor-in-Chief Bustin' Cohen. "Like when you wiggle chop sticks around in your ear drums."

Wrestling on wheels

New Provost Dan Pateat declined to comment on a report in last week's Goofordian that he omitted from his resume his tenure as a professional wrestler in America and England during the mid-1970s. Known early in his career as "Disco" Dan Pateat and later in England as Dan "The Meat" Pateat, the report claimed that he was the only grappler in history to win a wrestling title match while on roller skates. Should the report stand, Pateat would also earn the distinction of being the only professional wrestler to go on to become a provost at a Quaker college.

The Rogers Family?

A Gooford institutional advancement representative claimed that popular children's television star Mr. Rogers should donate money to the school because President Bill Rogers is actually a long lost brother whom he never knew. In spite of the two men's remarkable similarities in appearance and manner, a DNA test revealed that the representative had indeed fudged. (However, the test indicated that former democratic presidential aspirant Paul Tsongas and Mr. Rogers were in fact identical twins.) Mr. Rogers was so disgusted by the cheap tactic that he obtained a restraining order prohibiting Gooford administrators from entering "his neighborhood." The word of the day on Mr. Rogers' next program was "schmuck," but it was unclear as to whether it was related to the incident. "We couldn't even get the guy to donate one of his sweaters," the college's representative said. Mr. Rogers retorted, "I'm not the only one in the land of make believe."

Security update:

Tickets are no longer Gooford's punishment for parking violations

Bill & Bev
Photo staff

Security at Gooford College this semester has been given a large new budget to do things with. Director of Security Tyke Mison spoke to The Goofordian about the future of the department while taking in a show at Harper's II. Mison described the budget increase as "cool." When asked what he plans to do with the money, Mison, who is also chairman of Gooford's Women's Studies program, asserted, "We plan to squeeze—I mean—kick some butt."

Security's biggest problem this year is illegal parking. They plan to squelch this problem with a new vehicle code named SIP (Stop Illegal Parking). SIP will roam the campus using up large amounts of gas and frightening the older, tenured professors. Illegal parking will now mean instant demolition of your car plus any cars adjacent to yours. The owner of the wrongly parked automobile will be responsible for the removal of all damaged cars and will be required to compensate the owners of the other vehicles.

However the introduction of SIP on campus has been a bumpy ride. An important new administrator, Dean of Institutional Vehicles-Which-Weigh-Over-Two-Tons Dan Levitan, said that SIP was having trouble turning, thus demonstrating the need for enormous cranes to be strategically placed around campus, prompting the Board of Trustees to raise tuition 9.5 percent.

SIP tested in Binford parking lot. Photo by Ferris Bueller

Security drivers also expressed concern that SIP only has an AM radio and an eight-track player, and even with those meager amenities, they complained that "WQFS comes in over all that."

SIP seems to be getting off to an uphill start, but with a budget as fat as security's, the ride should become smooth really soon.

Satirist rejected from Fiji sojourn: professor to be eaten w/dip?, no trip

Jeffrey Dahmer
Personnel Manager

Students are questioning the admissions procedures of Gooford off-campus student programs following the alleged rejection of a student believed to be a cannibal.

First Year Student Gnosh Fraenkfurter believes he was dropped from the Fiji trip because of an article he wrote for the Goofordian, entitled "Meat eaters compelled by killer instinct." The piece, which Fraenkfurter claims is satire, equated all meat eating with cannibalism. Fraenkfurter is a vegetarian, prompting the Board of Trustees to raise tuition 9.5 percent.

Herstory Professor Kim Tircher, who is leading the group and decided on the applications, claims this is not the case.

"It is true I was disturbed by the article, but it did not form my decision, it only convinced me I had made the right decision. I had already decided to turn him down because I hate vegetarians. Those leafy buggers have got to go."

But Tircher feels she made the right decision in order to preserve the safety of those on the trip. "Say I took him, and he ate somebody. I'd be in a great position then. I am truly concerned that his norms are not in line with America's. Can't a deficiency in amino acids produce deviant behavior?"

"This is ridiculous," said Fraenkfurter, "even if I didn't know the difference between meat eating and cannibalism I wouldn't eat anybody... I'm a vegetarian... especially not Tircher. By the way, whatsa middle-aged herstory professor from Harvard doing driving a Fiero?"

"It's a studmobile," said Tircher. "Men drool all over it. I don't see any men hanging all over that damn granola's bicycle."

'Small' bomb explodes in Guilford Co. Courthouse, none killed

Reprinted with permission from the News & Record

A bomb made of some kind of explosive stuff reportedly went off in the Guilford County Courthouse yesterday, according to some people who said they were there.

Nobody was killed, but some people may have been injured, and some damage was definitely done. The bomb was "pretty small" said someone who contacted at the Courthouse.

This may or may not have been the work of one person. In a report last night, WGHP News said something about a death threat.

"Honey, have you seen my machete?" —Dan Pateat