Peeping Tom strikes

A peeping Tom was observed twice peering into shower stalls in the third-floor bathroom of Binford Hall last week.

According to Guilford security officials, a "suspicious person" was seen on Monday, Jan. 18 at approximately 9:30 am, and again on Wed., Jan. 20 at approximately 1:00 pm in one of the bathrooms.

Witnesses said the man was standing on a bench in an unoccupied shower, looking over the top into an occupied shower.

Security was called both times. Bulletins describing the suspect and incidents were printed up and posted around campus after Wednesday's incident.

Security has also imposed a 24-hour lockdown on stairwell doors in Binford until further notice.

Security officials Roger Nebel and Mary Ann Weedon said that the suspect has not yet been apprehended.

According to Weedon, there have been probable sightings of the suspect around campus but "no confirmations."

"Several people have been sighted fitting the description by students who weren't involved in the original incidents," Weedon said.

as being a white male with short, dark brown hair, approximately 25 years old and 5'8" with a medium build.

Witnesses said the suspect was wearing a mustard or brown leather jacket, blue jeans, and tennis shoes.

The last reported possible sighting of the suspect occurred on Thurs., Jan. 21, in Baumann.

"A student saw someone who looked like the suspect and called security. Security and the student then looked in all Bauman classrooms, but did not find the suspect," Nebel said.

Weedon said that a police report of both incidences has been filed with the Greensboro Police Department.

Other action has been taken as well. On Friday, Binford Hall director Charles Dunn and other Binford R.A.'s met with George Segebade to discuss what can be done for the Binford residents to ensure their safety.

Dunn said they are trying to "come up with things to increase security in the building" and will present these ideas before a Security and Safety committee on Feb. 3.

Joanna Iwata, Acting Dean of Student Life, will leave Guilford Feb. 19 to assume her new responsibilities as program associate for the Education and NonProfit group at the Center for Creative Leadership in Greensboro.

The CCL is an internationally renowned non-profit organization which specializes in developing executive-level training programs.

"It's a good opportunity to move in another career direction that is a complimentary area of expertise," said Iwata.

Iwata came to Guilford in 1988 as Director of Activities and Cultural Affairs. During her tenure with student activities, Iwata helped develop programs such as "artsETC" and the Lead project. In May of 1992 she was promoted to the Acting Dean of Student Life position. An interim replacement will be assigned to take over her duties until a permanent dean is selected.

Iwata is excited about her new job assignment but "will miss the many special associations... [I] have made among students, faculty and staff at the college over the past five years."

President's Honor Roll of Giving released

The knowledge of money donated to Guilford and how it has been spent is available in the recently released 1991-92 President's Report and Honor Roll of Giving.

According to President Bill Rogers, "The report is important for several reasons. It's a part of the archives, a report for trustees and Friends of the College, a record of faculty achievements, and a financial record of the college's fiscal strength."

The report details, "Balancing academic excellence and financial efficiency; learning and service; idealism and realism."

The report consists of summaries of academic programs, community service opportunities, and fiscal management, as well as updates on faculty scholarship and professional activity. A summary of the academic year, Guilford College College changes in fund balances, and an income statement are also included.

The report claims that "Guilford did increase financial aid dramatically," and "modestly increased salaries," even when "many colleges and universities were forced to cut budgets" as a result of "demographic and financial pressures."

The report explains that Guilford finished the 1991-92 academic year "with a balanced budget."

The report also cited the "major challenge in fiscal management over the last two years," namely, "the rapid escalation in the needs of students and their families for financial assistance."

Ten years ago, the financial aid budget had been $1.6 million; it currently stands at $3.6 million with an extra $400,000 in a college contingency fund.

The report also states that Guilford is "heavily dependent on two sources of funds: student tuition and fees and annual gifts from alumni and Friends of the College."

The report explains of tuition, "Guilford is proud to be able to keep our tuition at a level below the national median for selective liberal arts colleges."

From the 1990-91 year to the 1991-92 year, the increase in revenue generated from tuition and fees was almost $1.5 million from $12,672,734 to $14,159,797.

There was also an increase in revenue of auxiliary enterprises of just over $1,125,000. President Rogers explained that auxiliary enterprises are, "enterprises not directly related to the funding of academic programs."

These auxiliary enterprises, according to Rogers, include, "the rental of facilities to outside groups such as the Eastern Music Festival or revenue generated by the bookstore."

Where total current revenues increased, there was a decrease in federal and state grants and contracts and an increase in private gifts, grants, and contracts, and an increase in endowment income.

Financial aid also increased from the 1990-91 year to the 1991-92 year from $4,100,254 to $5,181,315.

Of the increase in financial aid,
