

This week on campus

NEWS BEAT

Panel on sport & spirituality

Shirl Hoffman, Head of UNCG's Dept. of Exercise and Sport Science, will join in a panel discussion with Guilford faculty, Gayle Currie, Jeannie King, Mike Ketchum, and Mike Welch. A nationally recognized authority and author on the subject of religion and athletics, Hoffman is critical of what he has dubbed "muscular Christianity" and "pigskin piety."

The panel discussion will be held 7:30 p.m., Monday, Apr. 12, in the Gallery.

Quaker decision making

Barbara Jefferson, a doctoral candidate at Pitzer College studying Quaker decision-making, will talk about her impressions of Quaker process at Quaker colleges she has been visiting. Her brown bag discussion on Friday, Apr. 16, in The Hut, follows a week spent on the Guilford campus.

All are welcome to attend.

Swinging singles—fewer next year

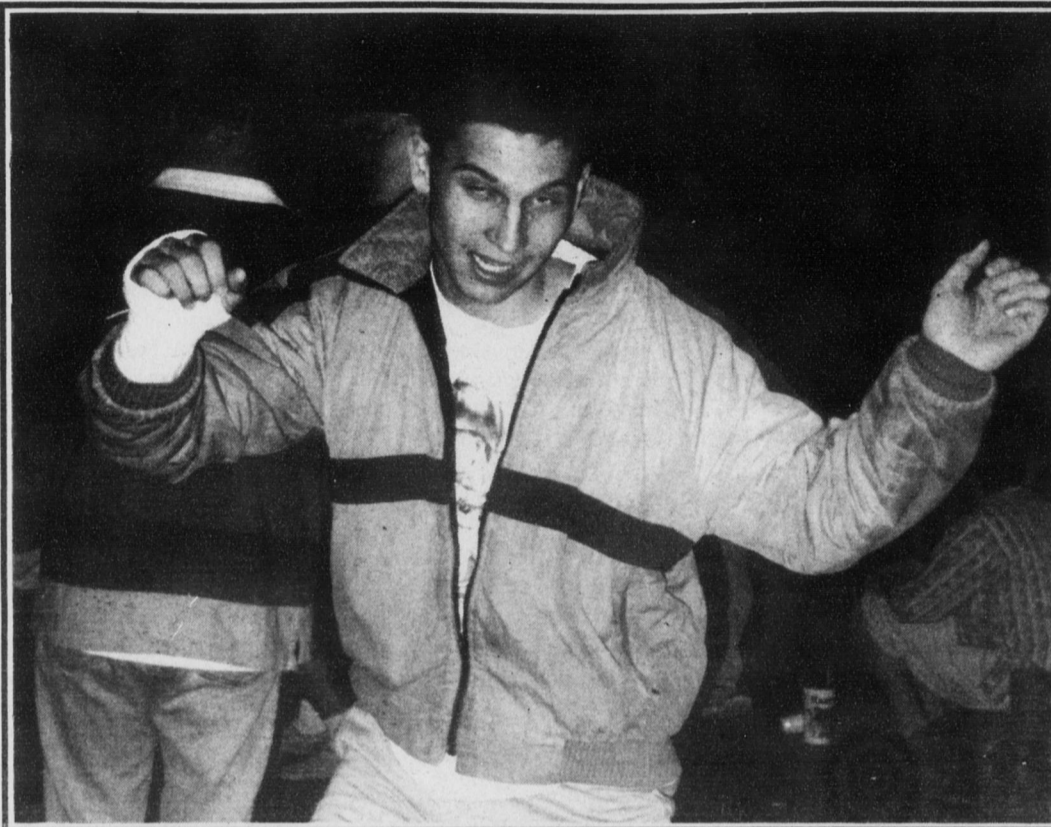

Next academic year, Guilford will be offering fewer single rooms than are used this year.

Presidential HOSTS will be getting roommates for the next year, and many students who petitioned for single rooms were turned down.

According to Provost Dan Poteet, "The residence halls are designed to consist primarily of doubles. College revenue estimates are based on that assumption. So this is a return to a practice that really should have been in effect over the years."

"The need for money" prompted the change in housing, Poteet said. "Revenue needs require that the college be less casual about this practice."

"It's philosophically important to the campus. It is intended to be a residential campus; it's not only a matter of money," Poteet said.

Many students enjoyed the Bryan beach party held on Saturday, Apr. 3. Here, Butch Maier slices up the floor with his fancy moves.

Senate Digest

Brian Sugioka
Senate Secretary

A proposed new publication, as well as several special requests, were among the issues discussed in Senate this week.

The proposed constitution for The Guilford Review was passed out and examined. Several students who support the proposal were on hand to answer questions.

The proposal would revive a magazine that in the past served primarily as a faculty discussion forum.

The new magazine would be published monthly and would offer in-depth articles written by Guilford students, faculty, administrators, and others associated with the college. The proposal will be considered at the next Senate meeting on April 7.

Among the issues that are likely to be raised are whether the publication might overlap with the Guilfordian, the possible cost of funding the new publication, and how writers will be found to fill the issues.

The Support Services Appreciation will take place April 13. The day will be in honor of the maintenance, housekeeping, and food services staff. Food and drinks will be available in Boren Lounge at 2:00.

There were two special requests brought to Senate this week. One was for $1,806 and was from the African American Cultural Society for their annual Sarah Curwood Memorial dance.

The other request was for a $406 loan to the Friends of Lesbians and Gays. FLAG will use the money to buy T-shirts and resell them at a profit.

In Student Loan Fund Auction news, Pruden reported that donations are continuing to mount.

Senators were asked to volunteer their time to help set up for the auction and to sell tickets at a table in Founders. Pruden reported that the cost of a ticket is $3 for Guilford students and $5 for faculty or administration. After some Senators expressed concern over having to pay to go to the auction, Pruden agreed to let anyone who has sold at least three tickets to get in free. The auction is still slated for April 7.

As a way of putting everybody's problems in perspective, Jen read an emotional message from Guilford professor Chris Gjording regarding his battle with cancer and how it has changed his life.
