learn on that day," AACS member Holly Canada said in support of having the day off.

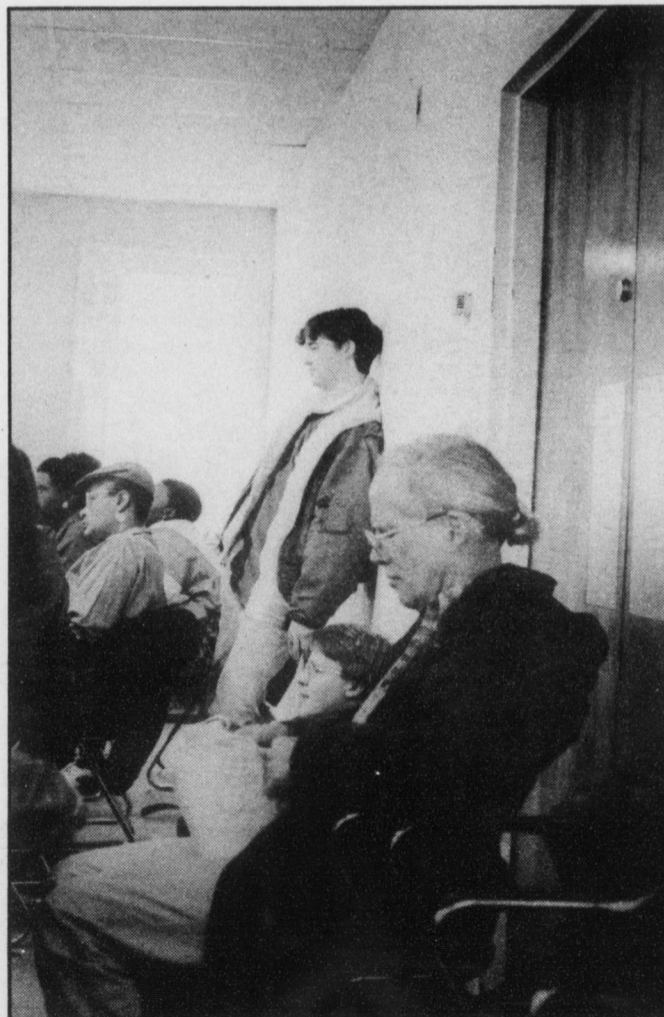

"We're not the only school struggling with this issue," said Robin Parsons, director of human resources.

Salem and UNC-G have designated Martin Luther King holidays. Greensboro and Elon have a floating holiday system where employees can choose between King's holiday and other days off. Davidson, High Point and Shaw have not declared King's birthday a holiday.

One option explored was whether King should be celebrated or if the day should be set aside as one of celebration and education about others who have won civil rights.

"I wonder if some celebration which may be needed for itself would distort [what King has meant to civil rights]," political science professor Bill Schmickle said. "I haven't decided myself where we ought to go with this."

Poteet said that "within a short time" there will be a recommendation from Administrative Council concerning the issue.
