

Campus Security chooses THRILL SCOOPER as new director

In a conscientious move by Gooford Security to better protect its students, Security has chucked its search for a director when the "perfect choice" stumbled through their prison doors, according to Evil Kanievel, one of the big cheeses. Thrill Scooper dashed his competition with his bicycle helmet initiative. "If we all wear bicycle helmets, we'll be a lot safer," Scooper said. "Besides, it's so attractive; it really fits the needs for Gooford's more dangerous students." Now that Thrill has his power position, "There will be an end to all mistaking me for my brother, Pooper."

The Gallery will be showing an exhibit of Edvard Much's prints from the Epstein Family Collection that was up until recently at the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C.

"I don't know," said Bill Mortal "His main work of art was a rip-off of that stupid movie Home Alone."

Okay. You've read so far; that's good. My only hope is that they won't copy edit this, and let it get through. Gail Sue Kasun, the supposed News Editor, is actually a so pissed off every time Fernie told me that deckin' somebody didn't mean I won and givin' me C's on my exams. I wuz about to get ready to do some real conflict resolution with my shotgun, but now I just trade it in and everybody gits to walk away real happy".

spy. I think I noticed that the real Gail was replaced about half-way through last semester.

This clone, or whatever foul demon spawn has taken her place, assigns us lowly staff writers non-newsworthy articles such as the ratings of the Food Services or the new director of controlling students' destiny. She or it is protecting someone or something, but what.

Well after about two months of hiding using skills I had picked up from my Sabbatical, where I was forced to watch American Ninja 1-3, and thanks to the aid of the Max Carter, the strongest man in the world, I was able to find out that Gail has been replaced by supporters of Guilford's administration and the squirrels.

It seems these squirrels have a great cover. Pretending to be nice cute small fluffy animals with big bushy tails hiding their malicious rodent-like nature that is bent on controlling the one fighting force that could truly stop any other army, the Quakers, they have forged treaties of blood and saliva with all the alumni. There is no hope.

Have you ever noticed how Guilford is overrun by those squirrels? They have free rein to do as they please. We only stop to look at them and go "how cute" or "how dexterous of it to use its hands that way," while in actuality they are planting small detonators stealthfully hidden as nuts.

Many of your professors have been replaced by these squirrels who have technology that when compared to ours is like comparing legos to dried-out play-dough. Their armor that allows them to appear as people is all especially equipped with a huge arsenal of weapons of destruction.

If you can flee, do so now. It may be your last hope before the squirrels openly rise in revolt.

The exhibit has been received with two very opposing views. Some say that Munch's works are powerful and mysterious while others condemn them as trite and overdone.

Peske Jeske tries out the new security system for Archdale. Apparently a failing English major held Dick Morton and Beth Keiser hostage screaming, "Screw the great white whale," and Chaucer be damned, all I wanna do is read Harlequin novels!!!" The security system has detected approximately 50 weapons, all strangely in the possession of Conflict Resolution professor Joe Groves. Said Groves, "Fike and I were just testing the system."
