system is slow, do 'show users' and see exactly how many people are using RASCAL at the same time," suggests White.

The Computer Advisory Committee is analyzing several solutions to this problem. According to White, they are soliciting a donated computer which would double the present capacity of RASCAL. It is agreed that in the future a newer, faster computer will be purchased.

When asked if there is anything Guilford students can do to help alleviate the problem, Sanford reminds students of the passage from the Student Handbook saying, "The system is for academic use", (pgs. 10-11). In other words, academics take priority over tel-netting and bulletin boards. Sanford also remarks that there is a student response service on Notes entitled "Suggestions" for students who have an idea of how to improve the system.

to Guilford. There isn't anything at Guilford that resembles the SAT."

Trelles defends the SAT cutoff by explaining that a standardized measure must exist to find students who are truly of high caliber.

The process for selection would be a component of the regular Honors scholarship selection. The candidates will participate in all activities of the Honors Interview Day, but will have three interviews instead of the standard two. The application will be similar to the regular Honors application, but the essay will be more substantial.

Recipients must maintain a 3.25 GPA in order to retain the full scholarship.

Trelles expects the scholarship to be offered next fall, and the admissions office is already restructuring applications for financial aid and scholarships.
