NEWS BRIEFS

Man who walked across Africa to speak Nov. 3

Patrick Giantonio, a former tree surgeon from Woodstock, NY who walked 4,000 miles across Africa to raise attention to world hunger, will present "Footsteps into Change," a 90-minute educational multimedia presentation on his four-year journey across the continent on Thursday, November 3. It will begin at 8 p.m. in Dana Auditorium.

"Footsteps into Change" includes hundreds of photographs from Giantonio's journey as well as music, narrative, and sounds from several African villages he visited. As he walked across the continent, Giantonio listened to hundreds of African people tell of their hardships and aspirations. His presentation tells of the African people's resilience and creative community response to the challenges and complexities of poverty, hunger and environmental depredation in Africa.

Carrying only a backpack, Giantonio started out from Kenya on New Year's Day in 1984 and concluded his four-and-one-half-year trip in Cameroon. Giantonio completed the walk in part as a campaign against world hunger and also as an attempt to bring a sense of the contemporary African experience to the rest of the world. Over the past six years, Giantonio has traveled across the United States to share stories and insights from his trip.

Giantonio's visit is sponsored by the Guilford Bonner Scholars Program, Project Community, Friends Center, the Guilford College Union, and the Office of the Academic Dean.

Poet and author Fred Chappell to give reading

Acclaimed poet and novelist Fred Chappell will read from his works on Tuesday, November 8. The event, sponsored by the Guilford College Poetry Center and College Speakers Fund, will begin at 7:15 p.m. in the Founders Hall Gallery.

A professor of English at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro since 1964, Chappell has published several novels and volumes of poetry over the past 30 years. He has received the prestigious Bollingen Prize in Poetry and the Award in Literature from the National Institute of Arts and Letters.

A native of Canton, N.C., Chappell draws on his childhood memories to write of the Southern experience. His early works, employing the conventions of the Southern Gothic novel, explore a world of violence and degradation, relating these social phenomena to the destruction of the traditional Southern society. Chappell is best known for Midquest: A Poem, a long poetic work concerning the author's 35th birthday. His more recent works include The Fred Chappell Reader (1987) and the novel, Brighten The Corner Where You Are (1989).

Wow!

Students, faculty and staff raised $94,645 during the 1994-95 Loyalty Fund Phonathon. This will go a long way in helping Guilford meet budgetary needs such as financial aid. Thank You!

A big thank you to Chris Arline '95 for the message of appreciation he delivered to President's Club donors and special friends of Guilford during the annual President's Dinner in September

Guilford Wins North Carolina Student Legislature Bid to Hold January IC

Cara Skeat
Staff Writer

When the Guilford delegation to this weekend's North Carolina Student Legislature went to Charlotte, North Carolina, for the October Interim Council (IC), they knew they wanted to host January's IC. As they drove back to Guilford Sunday evening, they were pleased to have succeeded in their bid.

About 23 colleges and universities will send 100 to 125 delegates to Guilford the weekend of January 20-22, 1995.

"We've been planning to bid for the IC since last spring," said Guilford College Co-Delegation Chairperson Joe Wallace. "One of the goals for this year's delegation was to have more on-campus activities and I feel that this will give everyone in the Guilford Community a chance to see what we are all about."

Once a month, delegates from many of North Carolina's colleges and universities meet in a mock legislative debate, or IC. Guilford College competed with the University of North Carolina at Asheville to secure the location of the January debate. In competing for the IC, the Guilford College delegation presented a skit and spoke briefly about the college and its surroundings.

The University of North Carolina at Greensboro and Greensboro College will help Guilford organize the weekend of debate; the "Greensboro Coalition" is becoming a force in the North Carolina Student Legislature.
