The Community Record

vital issues and events in community senate

 campus editor

Senate met November 1 and 8 this month. At the November 1 meeting, Senators were asked to consult with their constituents on how they feel about tiling the common rooms in the Bryan suites. A lot of money is spent every year to re-carpet rooms. Also, the Apartments often require repainting. A solution to this might be wallpapering.

Reading day, a day set aside for students to prepare for final exams, is currently on a Saturday. Senate discussed changing the reading day to a Friday so that students will have additional preparation time.

At the November 8 meeting of Community Senate, Stephanie Jennings reported that Guilford had been accredited by the SACS but that it was suggested that the intramural program be improved and that more opportunities for women in varsity sports be made available.

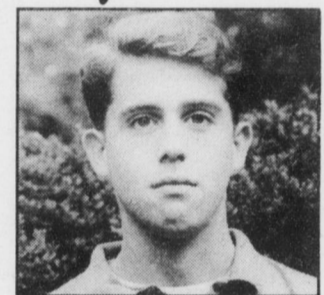

Al Newell visited Senate last week. Students expressed the concern that the honor's budget would be cut dramatically and asked how this would effect academic standards at Guilford as well as student retention. Al responded that although the actual budget would be cut a bit (the amount of money spent on financial aid increases annually and cuts must be made) a greater percentage of honor's students would be funded by need-based awards. He remarked that the board is not striving to attract a lower quality of students; they are acknowledging budgetary constraints.

Guilford is considering making the Dana houses, the Apartments, and Milner's second and third floor co-educational. Mona Olds reported to Senate last week that other schools which have similar policies have experienced reduced damage, a greater sense of community, less noise, greater concern for safety, and improved relations between males and females on campus.
