

Union making plans for exciting year

◆ Union started year with Welcome Weekend extravaganza, plans a blast for Serendipity

Two weekends ago, Union kicked off the fall semester with a Welcome Weekend bash. Many participated, taking in the sights, shimmying to the music and eating plenty of food.

For all of those ignorant fools and first-year students, Union is the group that provides most of the fun on campus. Cassie Morgan, Union President, and her compatriots have planned a plethora of activities, from the comedian, Spanky, to several coffeehouse performers and the usual Friday night flicks.

Cassie Morgan and her compatriots have planned a plethora of activities for this year.

Cassie also spoke about what many students are curious. "We will provide non-alcoholic drinks at all events—like sodas," she said. This will hopefully quench our thirsty throats at future Union activities like the Homecoming dance and bonfire.

Union, at the moment, is planning for this spring's Serendipity.

Nate Parsons, Ryan Beck, and Colin McFadden-Roan form the committee and await students' ideas.

"I hope that they have a zip-line into blue jello this time around," said Julie Klipp, a sophomore.

One new member to the team is James Richards, who holds the new coffeehouse chair position. Also, Kemba Bloodworth and her Spirit Squad will be promoting spirit at several athletic events in the upcoming semester. You can reach Union at x2303 to gain information on activities. Cassie and her group would appreciate input for future events.

three times our school's population, coming to visit our interesting new facility.

Gillis's reply to how this would impact the college was a sound assurance that the issue of overcrowding was a concern being addressed in meetings between YMCA and Guilford officials. He said that a cap on enrollment had been set at three times the college population. This, in effect may sound like a lot.

However, keep in mind that the YMCA patrons would not all be here at once. Their schedules, just like ours, are all different.

Another issue to think about is the approximate $8,000,000 price tag. 50% of this money would come from the YMCA and 50% from us. Because that is a lot of money, Guilford would need some help.

Moses Cone Hospital has offered to help in exchange for a satellite rehabilitation space in the new facility. All of this is still in the works.

Student sentiments on the issue vary. Corina Black, a senior, said, "I think it could really encourage a branching out into the community and a building of some good ties to outsiders."

Nathan Tarr, a junior, has a different opinion. "I'm not sure if people driving their cars onto campus from their suburban homes and participating in the YMCA for an hour would really be the right type of bridge."

If all goes as planned, in a year or two, we could be looking at another new building on our campus.

Proponents hope that the new construction would yield the most well built and physically healthy campus/community in the nation. Students will know whether to look forward to the new wellness center when January, 1999, comes around. That is when the proposal will be given to the Board of Trustees.

Corrections

Last week the name of the sophomore representative to Senate was misspelled in a box on the front page. The representative is Kemba Bloodworth. We apologize for the error.

The Guilfordian makes every effort to be accurate and responsible. If you should discover an error in an article printed in the paper, please do not hesitate to contact us at x2306.

Our circulation goal is to have a paper in the campus mailbox of every person on campus by noon on Friday. If you do not receive your paper, please let us know.
